While Husband At War, Wife Takes Charge Of Farm

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.)— Sue Vought has been solely responsible for herself and three children since her husband, Robert Vought, an E01 United States Naval reservist, was called to active duty last November. He is currently stationed in Guam where he loaded ammunition for the war in the Persian Gulf.

"It means a lot to have the children," said Sue, of daughter Sonya, 16; and sons Joshua, 14; and Caleb, 10.

Two years ago the Voughts began dairy farming while Bob continued his job as an equipment operator at the Somerset State Hospital. Prior to that, Sue had never milked a cow. Once she mastered the technique, the milking primarily became her responsibility while Bob fed the animals.

The dairy is located at Bob's homeplace, which is located a few miles from the Vought's current home. Most of the Vought's 22-head dairy herd consists of Ayrshire cattle.

Sue said that while she was somewhat stunned when Bob was called into active duty, she is grateful for all he had taught her about home and farm management.

"He always made sure I understood both the feeding end and the milking end," she said, "and all there is to know about the business and managing finances."

Despite her competent ability to manage the farm, Sue said, "It's lonely. But I'm so thankful I have the children and the church."

Sitting at the kitchen table, the Vought family wait for dad and husband Robert to come home from war to take over the farm. They are, left to right, Caleb, Sonya, Sue and Joshua.

Mid-Atlantic Alfalfa Yield Meetings Set For March In Maryland

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Mid-Atlantic growers could more than double their alfalfa yields with improved management practices, declares Lester R. Vough, forage crops specialist for the Cooperative Extension Service, University of Maryland System.

To back up his statement, Dr. Vough notes that alfalfa variety yield plots at the Clarksville facility of the Central Maryland Research and Education Center have ranged from 7 to 11 tons per acre over the past five years. This compares with a statewide average yield of three to four tons per acre.

To share some of the methods used at the research center, the Extension Service and the Maryland-Delaware Forage Council are sponsoring a series of three alfalfa management workshops across Maryland's northern

Pseudorabies Status Meeting Set

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.)— An educational and informative meeting aimed at updating swine producers on the current pseudorabies status in Pennsylvania is scheduled for Monday, March 11, 1991 at 7:30 p.m. in the Bergstrasse Elementary School (at the Route 322 exit of Route 222 across from the church).

Robert Fahnestock, Lancaster County swine producer and pseudorabies virus (PRV) coordinator, will address the current pseudorabies situation in northern

Ethanol Will Triple In Production

ANDY ANDREWS

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Ethanol will nearly triple in production in the next four years, said Bob Dinneen, legislative director of the Renewable Fuels Association, on Thursday at the Pennsylvania Corn Conference.

Farmers who wish to turn their corn production to ethanol, a gas additive derived from corn, may benefit. One bushel of corn equals about 2.5 gallons of ethanol (40 percent of a bushel converts to one gallon of ethanol).

"Auto manufacturers and consumers are becoming much more acceptive of ethanol blends," said Dinneen. About 120 million gallons of ethanal were sold in 1990 — up 40 million from 1989.

And because corn manufacturers have yet to profit from an existing market surrounding Philadelphia (which does not yet meet the federal standards and must begin to decrease carbon monoxide and other emissions through the use of an ethanol or other fuel additives), the Pennsylvania market has a "brighter future," said Dinneen.

Alternative fuels

The ethanol spokesperson said that 50 percent of all of the oil consumed in the U.S. last year was imported, and Congress has elected to pursue alternative fuels.

Congress has passed legislation which will allow small producers of ethanol (5-10 million gallons) a 10 cent per gallon income tax credit.

Farm Youth Soccer Star Drinks Milk

Farm youth, Keith Schlegel, was named All-American in soccer and his jersey was retired at Fleetwood Area High School. The photo includes parents Ken and Sharon Schlegel.

CONNIE LEINBACH

FLEETWOOD (Berks Co.) — Keith Schlegel would agree that lifting bales of hay on his family's dairy farm helped shape him into a high school soccer star.

The Fleetwood Area High School senior was named first team All-American player in December by the National Soccer Coaches Association of America. And on Monday, his jersey — No. 5 — was retired at the high school.

Keith, 18, is the seventh player in Fleetwood soccer history to be so honored. What's special about Keith's accomplishment is that he became a top scorer on the team

Farmer USDA Participation Aided For Desert Storm

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Farmers and others engaged in agriculture operations across Pennsylvania have been called to duty as part of Operation Desert Storm.

With several US Department of Agriculture program participation deadlines approaching, regulations to assist such producers have been issued. The new provisions will waive the normal agent or designee authorization documents which are unique to USDA programs executed by the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

"This will allow a spouse to take necessary actions to keep the farm operation involved with ASCS programs in conservation and wheat and feed grain programs without interruption," said Don Unangst, ASCS State Executive Director.

"Many farms depend on participation in these programs to preserve the environment and maintain the stability of farming operations," continued Unangst. "At this critical time, we are doing what we can to ease the worry of these families and to allow as much continuity of planning as possible for farm operations," Unangst concluded.

Details on current conservation and wheat and feed grain signups requirements can be obtained at any one of the sixty (60) county ASCS offices.

Northeast Chicken Parts

Wednesday, February 27, 1991

NORTHEAST BROILER/FRYER PARTS: PART 1 OF 2: FEDERAL-STATE: Trucklot buying interest was limited. Seller offerings of boneless skinless breasts varied; however, pricing was highly competitive at lower trending levels. Supplies of whole breasts were more available and at least adequate for today's lackluster call. Leg items were balanced to instances ample on some yellow product which was traded at sharp reduction to normal practices; thighs were in tightest balance. Yellow wings were adequate with supplies in Southern shipping channels sometimes noted heavy and discounted.

Delmarva Broiler Fryer Market

Wednesday, February 27, 1991

Movement of ready to cook broiler fryers was fair today, and about as expected for mid-week trading. Supplies were in good balance with immediate needs. Less than trucklot asking prices were steady at 49-62 cents. Live supplies were adequate. Average live weights were in a desirable range. Processing schedules were heavy. Trade sentiment was cautiously steady. In the parts complex, dark meat was adequate to fully adequate, boneless skinless breast were fully adequate, whole breast and wings were adequate.

National Egg Market

Wednesday, February 27, 1991

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE: Prices were unchanged to higher in the North Atlantic region, higher in the Midwest, and unchanged elsewhere. The market tone was fully steady to firm. Demand at all levels covered the full range, and was best into retail features and where wholesalers continued to seek additional eggs for anticipated needs as the March holidays approached. Supplies were adequate to barely adequate for immediate needs. Additional supplies were confidently held and intentionally accumulated. Breakers had about adequate supplies of eggs; some Midwest operations reduced schedules partially due to higher priced eggs and diminished finished product sales.

Eastern PA & NJ Poultry

Atlanta, Ga.

Wednesday, February 27, 1991

NORTHEAST LIVE HEN MARKET FEDERAL-STATE: Light type fowl prices generally unchanged, however offerings are limited and buyers are unable to fill slaughter schedules to desired capacity. Heavy hen availability remains tight with too few sales to report prices. Demand moderate to good. Undertone at least steady.

Prices continued to trend higher as further processors attempted to keep up with escalating costs. Trading activity was usually limited to fill-in business. Most breakers were cautious and worked accordingly. Floor stocks were generally adequate to handle current needs.

"2852 alfalfa stands up to everything."

"I've been using 2852 for four years," says Clyde Kreider of Millersville, Pa., "and it takes dry weather and wet weather equally well.

"In fact, two years ago when we had a great deal of wet weather it stood right through it when other alfalfas were going down."

Big on Protein

Funk 2852 features good lower leaf stay-green for improved forage quality.

"It's a real good looking alfalfa with leafy, fine stems," adds Kreider. "Tests have been good on haylage, and the protein content is up there, too."

Bigger on Yields

A fast-starting alfalfa, 2852 produces big yields thanks to its excellent regrowth. In fact, Kreider's field yielded a record 8.8 tons in the 1988 Pa. Forage & Grassland Council trials.

"2852 will yield with anything out there," offers Kreider. "If we had taken a fifth cutting in 1988 it would have topped 10 tons."

Backed by CIBA-GEIGY

Best of all, 2852 is backed by CIBA-GEIGY research. That's why you can count on it for unmatched yields, outstanding disease resistance and superior forage quality.

Find out for yourself why 2852 can stand up to everything. Talk to your local Hoffman Seed sales representative today!

Lancaster Farming

OPINION

Rainfall Tops The List

The reports of devastation and personal hardship for farmers in the drought-stricken areas of California have touched all of us. For five years in a row, these farmers have been without a crop. In the past, rain has come in years following a drought year, but this time, five consecutive dry years have reservoirs low, the ground dry and cracked and the state sending water for irrigation on to the cities. Of course, agribusiness and the total state economy is adversely affected.

While California is somewhere beyond the Rocky Mountains as far as our personal involvement in the East, their situation should teach us a lesson. In this area we have adequate rainfall every year to grow bumper crops. Not three years out of five. But five years out of five. We don't even need to irrigate our crops during most growing seasons.

That's why we believe the number one reason to preserve farmland in Southeast Pennsylvania, all of Pennsylvania, and in all of the states that border Pennsylvania, is because we have water. Sure, we're close to markets, we have the best soils, we need open space, and farming is a way of life. All of these reasons make our local farmland important.

But the major reason for governments, business and farm organizations, and individuals to work to preserve farmland and the family farm is water. We can't control the rainfall. But we can prevent this wonderful blessing from above from falling on an asphalt jungle.

One developer said we don't need all this good land for farming. Farmers can move somewhere else to farm.

We say, with all the empty, unrented business facilities and shopping center stores--with hundreds of new homes on the market that can't be sold, we don't need all this good land for development. Developers can move somewhere else to develop.

When you look at all the reasons to preserve farmland and the family farms in this area, adequate rainfall, year in and year out comes to the top of the list.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Be Award Of Safe Drinking Water

A private water supply is just that — private. The quality of your water supply is the responsibility of the homeowneer or farmer. State laws do not require testing and regulatory agencies do not monitor the quality of private supplies. Therefore, the only way you, as a water supply owner, can be certain that the water is safe to drink is to have the water tested periodically.

* What Should Water Be Tested For?

A comprehensive water analysis can be very costly. The following tests can determine the most common water quality concerns.

... BACTERIA: A test for total coliform bacteria can determine contamination from septic tanks or manure.

...NITRATES: Excessive levels of nitrates can be harmful to human infants and some animals, although the occurrence of this is rare. A level of 10 ppm nitrate nitrogen has been set for humans, 100 ppm for livestock.

...pH: Water with a pH less than 6.5 or greater than 8.0 can cause plumbing problems. Corrosion shortens the life of the pipe and can introduce dissolved metals into the water that can stain fixtures and pose a potential health hazard.

To assure that a well supply is safe, it should be tested for bacteria and nitrate at least once a year, preferably during wet spells. Only after accurate testing can a decision be made for treatment equipment.

To Avoid Soil Compaction

One of the real dangers of being in too big a hurry in getting on the soil in the spring with heavy equipment is that we pack this wet soil so hard that poor yields result. With modern machinery, the weight is much more than a team of horses or mules. As a result we have ground that is as hard as concrete and it is slow to recover. It is important to wait until the soil is dried out sufficiently before taking this heavy equipment over the fields. When the soil is worked too wet, it becomes hard and forms clods. This type of soil structure will not give you the best yields. Don't be in too big a hurry, slow down and leave the weather catch up to you.

To Plan Location For Tobacco Planting

We have been saying for years that animal and poultry manure is an excellent fertilizer. It still is... but not for tobacco. Research shows us that animal manure, particularly dairy, increases the chlorine content of the tobacco; this chlorine content reduces the "burn" quality of tobacco, and buyers frown on that.

Locate the area that you plan to transplant your tobacco, and be sure NOT to apply any manure to that area this year.

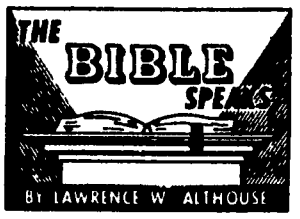
We suggest that a soil test be taken as an indicator of your present nutrient level. Then apply fertilizer at the recommended rates. The fertility program, recommended by Research Agronomists, for a 2,000 pound tobacco crop, should consist of 80 pounds of nitrogen, 35 pounds of phosphorus (P_2O_5) and 165 pounds of potash from either sulfate of potash or potassium nitrate. This fertility program will increase quality and reduce buyer resistance.

To Prune Fruit Trees

Whether you have a few or several hundred fruit trees, orchard pruning need not be delayed until spring. It may be started in colder weather. But it is good practice to work on the hardiest trees first.

Easy pruning can involve some problems from winter injury, but in many cases an early start will be necessary to complete pruning of large orchards before spring. By confining early work to the older, hardier trees, fruit growers keep injury to a minimum.

Apple and pear trees are the hardiest of the fruits, with plums and sour cherries next in order. Because peach and sweet cherries are most tender, delay their pruning, particularly the younger trees, until late March.



THE LIMITS OF LOVE

March 3, 1991

Background Scripture:
Luke 10:25-37.
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 22:34-46.

Have you ever noticed that the parables that Jesus tells seem to have nothing to do with what people believe? The parables always teach us how to live our daily lives. Yet, very often these very practical teachings on how to live have a great deal to do with what we believe.

This is what we see in the Parable of the Good Samaritan. It begins with a question about belief from a lawyer or scribe — one learned in the religious law: "Teacher, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" Luke tells us that he did this "to put him to the test." He hoped that Jesus would give an unorthodox answer that would spark a doctrinal argument. But Jesus refused to be trapped and turned the question back on the scribe: "What is written in the law? How do you read? Anxious to show his expertise, the scribe replied with a quotation taken from Deuteronomy 6:4 and Leviticus 19:18: "You shall love the Lord your God... and your neighbor as yourself." In response, Jesus says: "You have answered right; do this, and you will live."

KNOWING & DOING

But the scribe once more seeks to embroil Jesus in a theological controversy: "And who is my neighbor?" Jesus could very well have answered him with a one-liner: your neighbor is anyone needing your help whom you can help. Instead, however, he tells a parable that says that and more. Remember, the scribes prided themselves on knowing the law. But in the parable the "hero" is a Samaritan. As a lay person he would "know" far less than a scribe, and as a Samaritan even what little he "knew" would be wrong!

By the careful way in which Jesus crafted his story, he discreetly showed that it is more a matter of doing than knowing. The priest who "passed by on the other side" certainly knew what to do, but didn't. The Levite also knew the right answers, but he too refrained from doing what he could. All Jews knew that Samaritans were all wrong in their religious views. For one thing, they believed the right place to worship God was on Mt. Gerizim, not Mt. Zion in Jerusalem. Yet, although the Samaritan was guilty of "wrong beliefs," he did exactly the right thing: he helped the robbery victim, despite the fact that the victim was a Jew, a sworn enemy of any Samaritan.

LET'S BE REASONABLE

In a sense, the scribe had asked Jesus to say something about the limits of loving one's neighbor. We can understand that because we too often wonder if love doesn't have some reasonable limits. Obviously, we must help someone in our own family who is in need. We all "know" that, although we may not all act upon it. The same is true of our friends. But what about the family next door whom we hardly know and actually don't much like — they, with their loud stereos and dog who seems to like our yard a lot more than theirs?

And what about the people on the south end of town who live in perpetual squalor and unemployment? What about those Hare Krishnas who always accost us when we go to the airport? And even if all the others are my "neighbors," surely that doesn't include Saddam Hussein!

The answer is no less hard for us than it was for the scribe: in Christ there are no limits to love.

PLANT MORE MILK.

More milk per acre means more profit per acre, and W-L Alfalfas have proven their advantage - in milk and in dollars.

For example, WL317 produced 148 pounds of milk per acre over the top competitors in recent tests conducted by W-L Research. The results were derived from a program that calculates milk production based of forage quality. These tests clearly show that, pound for pound, it means more to a dairyman to plant higher quality alfalfa with high yields, than to plant a high-yielding alfalfa with lower quality.

The potential dollars per acre advantage using W-L Alfalfa came in at $92 greater milk yield per acre over the top competing varieties. And, that milk per acre value advantage with W-L Alfalfa adds up to greater profitability.

Time after time, top producers have selected W-L Alfalfa varieties that reward them with high quality, low cost feed.

It all adds up to more milk – and more profit – per acre.

Plant W-L Alfalfas.

Weight loss, resulting in poor body condition during early lactation, cuts down her ability to make milk and your ability to make money.

Ultra:Lac 22 combines the unique benefits of Megalac™ rumen bypass fat with a specialized blend of proteins, vitamins, minerals, sodium bicarbonate, even flavor enhancers, to remove the major limiting factors that could be holding back your top producers.

Ultra:Lac 22 is an enriched "package" of top-dress feed supplements designed to work together to increase peak production and lactation persistency. And because it's a top-dress, you can feed it to cows that need it most – top producers, thin cows, problem breeders.

To find out how Ultra:Lac 22 can keep your production headed in the right direction, contact your Agway Farm Enterprise salesperson today.

NEW ULTRA:LAC 22.

NOW THERE'S NO LIMIT TO HOW HIGH SHE CAN GO.

This man would prefer that you didn't plant Jacques alfalfas

He has a profitable little sideline selling hay to dairy farmers and beef producers whose alfalfa stands didn't produce enough to get them through the winter.

But he doesn't get many calls from farmers who grow Chief, Elevation or Multi-plier from Jacques. Because they produce more of their own high-quality alfalfa.

One reason, of course, is the genetic yield potential of Jacques alfalfa varieties. Elevation, for example, has one of the highest four-year yield averages among all varieties tested by the Universities of Minnesota and Wisconsin.

But another major factor is their unequaled disease resistance. Multi-plier earned 24 out of a possible 25 points under the University of Wisconsin disease resistance rating system. And no variety even begins to compare to Chief for its level of resistance to Phytophthora and bacterial wilt, the two most damaging alfalfa diseases.

That means Jacques alfalfas keep producing extra tons of alfalfa year after year.

So, this spring, seed the Jacques alfalfa variety that best fits your operation and grow more of your own high-quality alfalfa. Your friendly hay broker will just have to find some new customers. See your nearest Jacques dealer or call 1-800-321-2867, toll-free.

Dairy Days Feature Breeding, Feeding Of Cows

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Dairy herd management and breeding were the focus of dairy day activities in Lancaster and Lebanon counties this week.

Glenn Shirk, Lancaster dairy extension agent and Kenneth Winebark, Lebanon County livestock extension agent, held separate but similar dairy days to help dairymen in both counties better manage their dairy herds, especially in light of low milk prices.

A number of professors spoke at the events. Dr. Bruce Beachnau with Upjohn, a manufacturer of farm pharmaceuticals, spoke on breeding heifers and cows and using Lutalyse, a heat-inducing drug.

According to Beachnau, a seven-day system of injecting with Lutalyse and then observing heats can help dairymen cuts losses due to missed heats, extended calving intervals and milk flow loss.

According to Beachnau, there are many heifers and some cows that will not display a proper heat. He suggested using a program called the "Monday Morning System."

The system works in that all the heifers are injected with the heat-inducer and observed and bred for the next five days.

Those that don't display by the following Monday are separated and given a second injection, again with the same observation and breeding following.

Of those that again don't display a heat, they are given a third injection, the following Monday.

If there is no response to the third injection, Beachnau said a veterinarian should be consulted to determine the cause.

Both Beachnau and Dr. Paul Chandler, from Dresden, Va., said the ideal calving interval is about 13 months.

Both men also said that it is important to have heifers up to proper weight for the first calf. If not, it could lead to the "second lactation slump," a phenomenon commonly observed when a heifer isn't quite in shape to make a lot of milk following a second freshening.

Chandler said the time to add condition isn't during the dry period, but during the second part of lactation. And to help in success of breeding, it's important to not let the cow get overconditioned — it can cause problems with breeding and during delivery.

Chandler's main talk was to talk about feeding and managing dairy herds in times of low milk prices.

Chandler said that the difference in milk price should make no difference in feeding — it should be well-balanced and designed for the cow no matter what price the milk.

However, whether that means substituting lower cost feeds for higher costs feeds in the ration and the changes made to that, the dairyman should consult his feed dealer or extension agent for guidance in choosing the appropriate amounts.

Chandler added though, that as a result of tests on carcasses of dairy cattle, it can be showns that most cows can stand to lose one score in body condition during the early part of lactation — that time when peak production is being set.

Chandler showed charts that indicated that no matter what level a cow produced, the lactation curves were almost identical and that in order to get more milk, it is important for the cow to make milk during the first part of lactation. He said that the rate of milk production that can occur during early lactation and the peak reached within the first 60 days sets the level for the rest of the 305 days.

He said that feeding to encourage production and also to encourage the cow to use some of her condition off her back during early lactation could help dairymen get more milk and cut overall feeding costs.

He added that a cow should be at least have a body score of 3 in order to lose one score.

Other speakers included Dr. Stanley Curtis, with Penn State University, who spoke on good dairy husbandry and animal welfare.

Later Beachnau said that with all speakers, the emphasis has been to care for the cow, with properly designed stalls for cow comfort to proper feeding to keeping in good conditioning, good water sources and social interaction.

He said that as a start in educating the public as to what animal husbandry is really like, perhaps they should start talking about substituting the word "welfare" instead of other terms used to describe animal culture.

Raising corn was never an easy task. But raising it with the side effects caused by some herbicides makes it tougher than ever.

Fortunately, there's Laddok® herbicide. Laddok controls 28 different broadleaves, including velvetleaf, cocklebur and pigweed.

Laddok even helps you avoid problems other herbicides cause, like stalk brittleness, damage to brace roots and vapor drift injury to beans.

So if you're looking for a way to control broadleaves while managing atrazine and preventing unwanted side effects, try Laddok.
And make growing a bumper crop your only real concern.

Ag Representatives From Hungary, U.S.S.R. Tour Lancaster Farms

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — While the U.S.S.R. and Hungary search for viable methods to make farming more profitable in Eastern Europe, they are checking out Lancaster County farms.

Lancaster County Extension Agent Jay Irwin led an entourage to the farms of John L. Landis, Lancaster; Kreider's Dairy Farms, Manheim; and Dan L. Martin, Manheim.

"We especially have an interest in distribution of milk products," said Dr. Logvin Overchuk, agricultural attache from the U.S.S.R.

"We are the largest producer of milk in the world but much of the milk is lost through transportation problems," he said.

Overchuk said that the average size of a Soviet collective farm is about the same as the John Landis farm with its 250 cows.

The visitors seem impressed that Landis, his wife, and four other employees can handle the work load on a farm that produces 2,000 gallons of milk a day.

Hungarian representative Josef Popp said the average farm in his country is 50 acres but that farms in Eastern Europe are sometimes 15,000 to 30,000 acres.

"We want to privatize the collective farms, but it is a very difficult matter. Because we haven't had private ownership for many years, we don't know the value of the land and we don't know who should get the land," he said.

Popp added that the European farms have a lot of debt. The government budget cannot handle the debt and a buyer would not want to assume that debt. This adds to the difficulty of knowing how to privatize the farms.

Although most of the European community is for subsidized farming, Hungary is definitely against it.

After the visitors toured the farm of Daniel L. Martin, Manheim, they expressed a keen interest in how cooperatives function. Martin, a retired director of Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, explained that the co-ops are independent from each other, an idea that was difficult for the visitors to grasp because they believed the government had to control each co-op.

Both U.S.S.R. and Hungary hope that Lancaster County farmers will accompany extension agents on a visit to their countries.

Allan Mustard, who works for the U.S. as the Eastern European and Soviet secretariat; Guy Haviland Jr., the U.S. coordinator for the Eastern Europe and Soviet secretariat; and Dr. J. Dean Jansma, Penn State associate dean for international programs in agriculture; accompanied the tour.

Pennyslvania Ayrshire Convention Features Sale Sweepstakes

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co.) — The second annual Pennsylvania Ayrshire Convention is to be held March 22 and March 23 at the Solanco Fairgrounds in Quarryville, Lancaster County.

This year's convention is to feature a special sweepstakes awards in conjunction with the state Spring Sale, which is held the second day of the convention.

Also new, the spring show is to be an open show this year, although junior members and youth are encouraged to participate.

Registration deadline for cattle entries in the show is March 18.

Registration for the convention is $15 per person and includes the Friday evening banquet meal and a 9:30 a.m. brunch on Saturday.

Registration For Show

The Spring show is to be held Saturday, starting at 12:30 p.m., following the end of the official convention activities.

Judge for the show is James McCaffree, from York, and all sale animals, as well as show-only animals are to be eligible for premiums.

Animals brought in for the show must be registered in the owner's name by the day of the show. Contact your veterinarian for Pennsylvania's health rules.

Animals should be brought to Solanco Fairgrounds between 9 a.m. and noon on Friday, March 22. Hay and straw will be provided.

Premiums are to be paid in seven classes — Intermediate Calf, Dec. 1, 1990 to Feb. 28, 1991; Senior Calf, Sept. 1, 1990 to Nov. 30, 1990; Summer Yearling, June 1, 1990 to August 31, 1990; Junior Yearling, March 1, 1990 to May 31, 1990; Intermediate Yearling, Dec. 1, 1989 to Feb. 28, 1990; Senior Yearling, Sept. 1, 1989 to Nov. 30, 1989; and 2-Year-Old, Not Fresh, Dec. 1, 1988 to August 31, 1989.

Premiums are to be paid for the first 10 places: $25 1st, $20 2nd, $15 3d, $10 4th, $5 5th-10th.

Other classes, without a premium, are for best three females and best junior animal bred and owned by exhibitor.

Junior members are also invited to compete in a showmanship and fitting contest. The three age group divisions are Novice, for first year members; Junior, for those 13-years-old and younger; and Senior, 14 and older.

Spring Sale Sweepstakes

A unique idea has been initiated to challenge Ayrshire breeders to consign top quality calves and for the purchasers who buy tyhe calves.

If the purchaser raises the calf and has her complete a 305-day record and has her appraised, she will be eligible for sweepstakes awards.

All animals are eligible, as long as they have gone through a Pennsylvania Spring Sale, 1990 and beyond, uncalved, regardless of year. It is the calendar year that the record is made that qualifies them for the spring sale sweepstakes.

All animals that complete a first lactation record in a calendar year are eligible. Records will be computed on a 305-day, mature equivalent, 4 percent fat corrected milk basis.

Sweepstakes winnings will be awarded at sale time in the spring following the calendar year in which productin and type appraisal is made (both must be in the same year).

Awards are to be $100 for first place production; $60 for second place; and $40 for third.

A 10 percent bonus will be added if the animal is appraised 80 or above during the same calendar year that the production is made.

The purchaser/owner of the animal is responsible for nominating their animal for sweepstakes to the secretary of the Pennsylvania Ayrshire Breeders' Association before Dec. 31 of the year that the 305-day record is made. DHIA or DHIR will be the only records accepted.

The secretary will need verification of record from DHIA, or the Ayrshire Breeders' Association office in the case of DHIR.

Those wishing to attend can make their own sleeping accommodations at one of the following: Willow Valley Motel, about 8 miles away, (717) 464-2711, ask for Monica; Runnymeade Farm Guest, a bed and breakfast facility about 2½ miles away, (717) 786-3625; or Little Britain Bed & Breakfast, about 10 miles away.

Trucks, Hard Work, Cooperation Pay Off

About two and one-half years ago Pennsylvania DHIA made a tough decision to abandon the traditional method of preserving and shipping milk samples. From 1970 to 1988 the association used disposable sample bags and potassium dichromate preservative to collect and preserve samples, and sent them to the Service Center in State College by UPS and Parcel Post.

In 1988 the decision was made to replace that system with rigid plastic sample vials, bronopol preservative and refrigerated shipping on association-owned trucks. The primary reason for the switch was to replace toxic potassium dichromate and costly disposable bags with recyclable, non-toxic materials.

There was an initial investment in trucks, sample vials and refrigerators to store samples at 97 truck stops across the state. And there were additional on-going costs in the form of wages paid to supervisors to deliver samples to the truck stops, washing and recycling the vials, and truck drivers to pick up samples.

After almost two years of operating the new system the benefits of the change can be cleary seen. Foremost is the decreased turn around time, or the number of days from when the supervisor finishes at the farm to the time the reports are put into the mail and sent back to the farm. Until the new system was started, average turn around time had never been lower than 4.1 days. In fact, six years ago a record was set when it got down to 5.6 days. Last year the average was 3.5 days.

What you see at your farm differs because of mailing time to your farm from State College after the reports are mailed, and that varies considerably from farm to farm and from day to day. At the recent DHIA district meetings the directors present indicated that if any programs can be made from here, we should try to bypass the U.S. Postal Service to speed the return of the reports and also save the postage for mailing, which went up 16% this month.

This improvement in service quality would not have been possible without the hard work and cooperation of a lot of people. Credit is due to local boards of directors in all the counties who helped set up local truck stops, and to the DHIA supervisors who agreed to deliver samples there. It's the kind of cooperation that built DHIA, and the kind we still need today to make the organization even more effective for members.

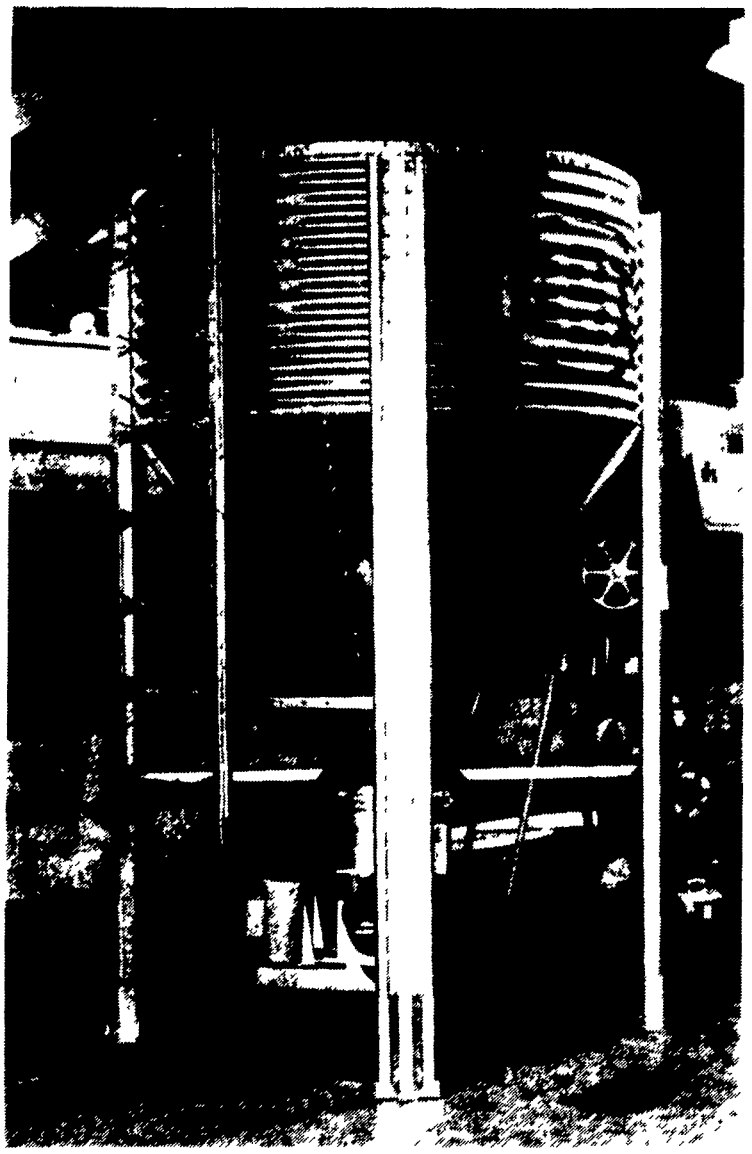
AFS and CCE Holds Equipment Open House



About 300 people showed up Thursday for a barbeque lunch and to peer over the latest in feeding and silo equipment offered by Automatic Farm Systems and Cedar Crest Equipment at an open house sponsored by both Lebanon County businesses at the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds. This GSI feed bin with a flail agitator is but one of the many displays that included such items as forage blender to make a Total Mixed Ration, hydrostatic feed carts, silage auger, fans and heaters for grain bins slurry pumps. Both AFS and CCE are local dealers for the equipment and the open house featured representatives from the different equipment manufacturers to answer any questions. Also present were representatives for A-K Computers in Lebanon displaying business and personal computers. Myron Martin, sales manager for AFS said the open house is the second annual event sponsored by the two farm equipment dealers. "I was pleased with the turnout.

Diversification Helps Dairy Survive

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

KLEINFELTERSVILLE (Lebanon Co.) — Fifty years ago, chickens and cows were normally seen on the same farm.

Today that is not true.

With specialization in agriculture, mono-livestock production is the norm.

However, for at least one dairyman, the axiom of not having all of one's eggs in one basket is still true. And about 15 years ago, it prompted him to establish poultry production facilities on his dairy farm.

With milk prices so low as to barely enable dairymen to cover the cost of making milk, the dairy-poultry producers may have an advantage in economic hard times.

For Donald Bollinger, who lives on the family's century farm near Kleinfeltersville, the addition of a poultry production operation could prove to be his saving grace should dairy profits mire down any more.

Luckily for him, he started with contract poultry production in the 1960s, in order to financially bolster the family farm income and make it possible for him and his father to go into partnership.

Today he milks 44 registered Holsteins and tends three large poultry production houses that are capable of raising 118,000 broilers every six months.

Under contract to Pennfield Farms Inc., the poultry business will probably see him and his family through until farmer milk prices regain their proper level.

"That's one of the reasons we went into chickens, something else besides milking. In 1960s, we went through a couple bad years.

We wanted to put in extra cows, but we didn't make enough feed. This was a means of puting up extra income," he said.

Other sideline alternatives exist for the dairyman. There's driving truck, hauling milk, testing, or, as some others did, starting their own family bottling operation.

The Bollingers did not opt for their own bottling operation, because the market wasn't there.

"At that time, we would have been in competition with the existing Valley View Dairy (which is now out of business)," Bollinger said.

The contract poultry business seemed the most likely to provide an adequate additional income and allow him to stay around the farm close enough to keep with the dairy herd.

To start in the contract business, Bollinger had to come up with some front money. He supplies the buildings and feeding and watering equipment. The company supplies feed and covers all other production expenses, including electric and propane.

Dead chickens are composted. The chicken manure is also used on the farm.

And in addition to the profits he makes — a certain amount per bird — the Bollinger family is allowed to harvest as many of the birds they want for their own consumption.

It's an alternative that others are still doing.

With the dairy prices as they are, "The profit's gone. With tests and premiums we had all but $16," he said.

But no more.

Donald said he will continue to register his Holsteins, however, and not cut costs in that area. Despite low prices, "Good cows are still going to be in demand. And the price for bull calves is still good."

Other than some belt tightening, Bollinger said he doesn't know how he will fare with the current milk price. He said he doesn't set a budget for the dairy.

"I never had luck with any budgets. I could never figure out what was going to happen 12 months down the road.

"I shipped 928,000 pounds of milk last year, which was the highest I ever had. I doubt if I have that much this year. We had more cows last year.

"And I had four to five high producing cows die. I might have another one die tomorrow, but then I might not have another."

He is responsive to market changes, however.

"We're changing feed rations because we're going to get paid less for fat. We're puting more emphasis on pounds of milk.

Dairyman Donald Bollinger holds the bird that may help him fly through depressed milk prices without getting hurt badly.

"When we use bulls, we look for higher protein."

He said he started making the switch in breeding decisions about three years ago.

"We knew it's coming, we just don't know when, (the change in emphasis from butterfat to protein.)"

He said he doesn't plan any capital improvements soon. The pipeline is 20 years old. The milking stable is 30 years old. and the earliest poultry houses contain equipment that's also getting old, but is functioning very well.

"We won't add (to the herd) except what we get out of our own heifer program.

"When you look at why we were getting $16 last year, in some ways it was fate."

Bollinger cited several reasons for cutbacks for milk production and high demand that happened at the same time to produce high milk prices — the drought and short feed supplies that had reduced herd numbers, the quality of feed was down and and milk production was also consequently decreased, and world demand for powder was up and the federal reserves were empty.

"Now they are all turned around," Bollinger said.

A member of the Lebanon County board for the Pennsylvania Farmers Association, on the board of the county Soil Conservation District, and a member of the Holstein Association, Bollinger said he tries to stay on top of events that could affect milk prices.

However, he and many others, who anticipated some drop in milk price, were surprised with the degree of drop in price.

The support of organizations such as the Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency (RCMA), Producer's Equilization Agency (PEA), and Middle Atlantic Cooperative Marketing Agency (MACMA), to secure over-order premiums do help the dairyman.

Otherwise, the difference in profit by the milk producer and the milk handler (such as bottlers) fluctuates too much.

Meanwhile, the price to the consumer stays the same.

In the meantime, while the discrepencies continue within federal order pricing and the distribution of retail profits, alternative farming can help dairymen.

The low prices continue to frustrate many dairymen, and Bollinger said the shortage of milk locally doesn't seem to justify the sharp drop in price.

However, he said he will just keep at it until times get better.

"I'm just like the Iraqui Army — I'm hunkering down. And I'm hoping chickens pay me alittle bit more this year."

"I'm not sorry we did it (added chickens). In 1966 to 1969 the buildings didn't cost as much as they do now, and they're putting up new buildings all the time. The pay back just isn't as fast."

Although some speculate that low prices and increased competition between dairymen to produce more milk and secure a larger share of the market means further demise to the family farm, Bollinger disagrees.

"I think there's still a place for a family farm," he said. The large operations, of which there will probably be an increase, will "bring on a whole set of different problems.

"The trouble is you have to have hired people do that work for you (when you enlarge a dairy). Then you lose incentive."

But he said he is glad he added on the poulty operation. Other than very strict bio-security (the Bollingers escaped demise wrought by the avian influenza), he said the poultry operation is easier to handle than the dairy herd.

"You almost have to be an owner with a dairy herd, because they take more individual attention."

In addition to the poultry and dairy, Bollinger crops about 110 acres in corn and alfalfa, all for on-the-farm use.

Lower your feed costs with Farmline Enzymatics.

Applied at harvest, the exclusive blend of Farmline bacteria and enzymatics improves haylage preservation and "predigests" forage fiber into sugars. With less fiber and more energy in your haylage, you can

- feed more home-grown forage
- reduce purchased protein and energy costs
- increase milk production

In fact, results from universities and producers have shown that a $1.00 investment in Alfazyme or Grasszyme enzymatics can increase net income by $4.00 to $8.00 and was named All-American as a defensive player. The other six Fleetwood All-Americans were offensive players.

It's the offensive players who usually make the big splash, said Tom Prachar, Fleetwood athletic director.

"It's unusual for defensive players to be All-American," he said. But Prachar noted that Keith could probably play all areas of the game, he's that good an athlete.

"We're very proud of him," Prachar said of Keith. "He's very dedicated, very unselfish."

Keith's soccer shirt will go into the high school display case along with other Fleetwood soccer players who have reached the same pinnacle.

But the whole world cannot pass through the high school lobby.

So Keith's dad, Kenneth, secretly had a professional artist paint an eight-by-eight, full-color sign proclaiming his son's greatness.

The sign, hung on a barn door of the family's Fleetwood R.D. 2 Holstein farm, says: "Make it Milk, Milk Builds All-Americans." Illustrating the words is a likeness of Keith in his glory — kicking a soccer ball.

"I was shocked," Keith said about the moment he first saw the sign, one day after school. Ken and his wife, Sharon, chuckle as they describe how they kept the sign a secret then surprised their son by hanging it to face Route 662.

"Strangers stop and take pictures of it," Sharon said.

Through the years, Keith has had to help run the family's farm, called Ker-Min Farms, which has 90 milk cows. The farm is named after Keith's grandparents, Kermit and Minnie Schlegel, and their house is on the main tract. Keith and his family live in a house just up the road, where 100 heifers are housed. But the entire concern is like one big farm.

On more than 250 acres, the family grows corn, wheat, alfalfa and oats, Sharon said. Last fall, the Schlegels were the second Berks County family to sell the development rights of the 190 acres that they own to the state under the new agriculture land preservation act.

Wherever and whenever he could, Keith found ways to practice his soccer skills while doing his chores.

"He has soccer balls all over the barn," Ken said.

"I'd watch the corn fill up and kick at the same time," Keith said. After school, there were bales to lift.

For his relentless efforts, Keith has received a succession of honors: best soccer player in the state and Berks MVP last year; Mid-Atlantic Regional Team, 1990; three times All-Berks team; and Fleetwood Lions Tournament MVP in 1988, 1989, and 1990, to name a few.

This past season, Keith began playing in an offensive position, but the team's defense collapsed, he said. So he was put in a defensive position and, still, with 20 points, was the third-leading scorer for the Tigers (15-4-4) in the Berks League.

"Defense makes the offense," Keith said about his value to the team.

Although the Tigers won their Division IV, they lost their first quarter-final match for the county championship.

Soccer, though it is Keith's first love, is not the only sport in which he excels, Prachar said.

"He plays basketball and is a very talented baseball player," Prachar said. "He always hustles no matter what the circumstances. He's a coach's player."

Keith's soccer career started by accident about 10 years ago, Keith said, when one night a friend recruited him to play as a substitute.

At first, Ken said, he told the neighbor that Keith could not play soccer because he was already playing baseball.

"I thought one sport was enough," Ken said. "I needed him here on the farm."

But the neighor was persistent, and Keith joined the game. It was a rainy night, Keith said, but that didn't stop them from playing.

"I loved it," he said. It was like those who get bitten by the theatrical bug when they first take to the stage. Ray Buss, Fleetwood soccer coach, has encouraged him throughout his school career, he said.

Other sports just haven't captured his interest the way soccer has. "I don't like to be bored," Keith said about baseball, in which he has played shortstop all four years. "Baseball got boring. Any position in soccer is better than baseball."

Soccer's chief attraction is the action, he said. "I like to run," he said.

He and his brother, Kyle, 14, play all the time, Keith said. In the summer, he's on the soccer field every evening. About the only television he watches is when he reviews some of the hundreds of videotapes of professional games and those his dad has filmed in the last few years.

And Keith knows what's on each tape, Ken said.

"He knows right where each game is," Ken said. "Someone called once wanting to see a certain game and Keith said, 'Yep, I know the one,' and pulled it right out," he said.

Posters of Argentina's Diego Maradona, the best soccer player ever, festoon his room, he said, giving him constant inspiration. And a trip to England and Scotland two years ago with his team also gave him lots of drive.

Four colleges are interested in Keith: Mount St. Mary's, Penn State, East Stroudsburg, and the University of Maryland in Baltimore County. But Keith has not decided on his plans.

Penn State is his first choice, he said, but he may have to wait until the winter term to get there because his grades aren't as high as the university would like them to be to accept freshmen at the main campus.

Although he doesn't plan to follow his father's footsteps in Holstein farming, his team nickname is "Farmer," because he was the only one on the team whose family is in agriculture.

He didn't like it at first, he said, but now he's gotten used to it, and the moniker is emblazoned on the back of his warm-up outfit.

Keith's coaches think he has a bright future in soccer. It's apparent the young man can accomplish what he sets out to do.

With a smile, he says, "One of my goals was to be All-American."

Holstein Convention Sale Sees Good Prices

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

READING (Berks Co.) — Although there were no five figured sales for consignments at the annual Pennsylvania Holstein Convention Sale held in the ballroom of the Berkshire-Sheraton in Reading, officials and participants said they were pleased with the prices paid and the quality of animals offered.

The annual sale saw an average price of $3,183 on 52 head with the top selling animal, yearling Eric Dew Blackstar Dana-ET consigned by Timothy and Teresa Kissling of Robesonia, bring a top price of $8,500. The buyer was Erica Davis of Kutztown.

The second highest animal sold was also a sub-yearling, Plushanski Mar Frigga-ET, consigned by Plushanski Farms in Kutztown. Frigga brought $8,000 and was bought by Ron and Etsel Maidens, of Belleville.

"We were real pleased with it," said Kenneth Raney, director of membership service. "There were good quality animals and, for the market we're in right now, we're real pleased with the volume and average. We had good participation and they were bidding really well."

"For the market we're in right now, we're real pleased with the volume and average."
— Kenneth Raney, PHA

About 1,100 people were in and around the large ballroom for the sale. The ballroom was large, and filled. It was comprised of three convention halls that were opened up by colapsing the folding dividing walls.

Buyers and participants were not restricted to Pennsylvania. There were quite a few people from out of state, including those nearby in New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland. However, only three animals sold went out of state.

The consignments offered also included a sprinkling of animals from outside the commonwealth borders. "We try to get the bulk from Pennsylvania, but there were a couple from New Jersey and a couple from Maryland and one from North Carolina," Raney said.

"I think the animals sold very fairly for the values we had. You like to see some sell for $10,000 to $15,000. You really have to have something really special to have five figures," he said.

Upcoming for the Holstein Association is a spring sale on April 6 to be held in the Penn State Ag Arena in State College. Raney said he expects there will be about 150 to 160 head offered for sale.

The site for the 1991 convention was the second time the state association held it there. According to Raney, it was held there 12 years ago, but then, instead of having the sale animals held in barns on the nearby Berks Penn State Branch Campus, "there was a barn (next to the Sheraton)."

The whole area has been radically changed since then.

In other business at the convention, the association also held it's 78th annual meeting.

Several resolutions were passed. Of those:

• The Pennsylvania Holstein Association urges the Pennsylvania Animal Health Commission to establish an action program to control and eradicate Bovine Luekemia.

• The PHA supports a Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board as a separate body of the legislature and opposes vigorously any attempt to place this board in any executive department of bureau; and that the operating budget continue to be funded by a state appropriation.

• The the PHA stresses educating the public on accepted animal husbandry practices and the benefits of these practices to consumers; and that research projects be conducted by the Department of Agriculture to produce facts to determine if stress affects animal health and that these results not be published until proven and complete; and that if humane treatment of animals is taught in school, the program should include an explanation of accepted animal husbandry techniques and the value to the general public.

• Whereas there is a constant need for state appropriations for agricultural research into animal and plant diseases, more effective produciton techniques and conservation and nutrient management, be it resolved that the PHA supports needed state appropriations for agricultural research and; that the assocation continue to work with other groups to secure additional alternate funding or tax base to fund general agriculture research.

The top seller at the 1991 Holstein Association Convention Sale was Eric-Dew Blackstar Dana-ET shown herd by Timothy Kissling and daughter. It was puchased for $8,500 by Erica Davis of Kutztown.

• Whereas we beleive in the basic philosophy of free world markets, the PHA recommends that the United States does not import competing agriculture products which are subsidized by foreign governments, and if any subsidized products enter the United States contervailing duties must be applied; and that American consumers be protected by the SUDA by refusing imports which are below American standards for health and quality; and that agriculture continue to have fair representation on the GATT negotiating team.

• Whereas the average Pennsylvania dairy farmer stands to lose $25,000 in income in 1991, unless the dairy industry deals with the national milk surpluses that continue to drive down prices, and a two-tier pricing program would be intitiated only if supplies would be anticipated to be in excess of demand, and the level of government purchases before a two-tier program would be intitiated should be based on total solids purchased by the CCC in excess of 4 percent of commercial sales (When CCC purchases are reduced to 2 percent of commercial sales, the program would terminate.); be it resolved that the PHA supported 1.) a two-tier pricing program; 2.) that the current producer's base would be determined by taking actual production for the last five years and throwing out the lowest two years and averaging the remaining three years (base would be determined on total pounds of milk, however, the producer has the option to request an adjustment to his total pounds by using total solids or butterfat); and 3.) in order to keep base, the producer must produce at least 80 percent of base, a base that is transferrable, with a new producer to negotiate the market price to purchase the base from a producer leaving the dairy business.

• Whereas the Pennsylvania All American Dairy Show has served the dairy industry since 1964 and in 1990 hosted the national shows for all six competing dairy breeds including, for the 24th time, the Eastern National Show, and the show offers an ideal location at the Farm Show complex, and the All American Show is financially sound, and the premiums offered during the 1990 six-breed show totaled $81,300, and the All American offers an ideal milking facility with milk sales at more than $6,000, and the All American hosts . . .

The PHA urges the continued designation of the Pennsylvania All American Holstein Show as the Eastern National Holstein Show; and that the All American Dairy Show and the Holstein-Friesian Association of American recognize the 1991 show as the 25th Anniversay of Eastern National Holstein Show at Harrisburg.

• Whereas the animal health commission has the responsibility for establishing adequate diagnostic laboratory services for the state of Pennsylvania; and whereas such service presently being offered are not on a par with what other similar major livestock states offer such as New York and Wisconsin; be it resolved that the PHA . . . goes on record as strongly recommending the commision support the establishment of one modern, centrally located, Animal Health Laboratory; and that the plan for the construction, equipping and operation of such a laboratory be developed by July 1, 1992.

The second highest seller at the 1991 Holstein Association Convention sale was this consignment from Plushanski Farms in Kutztown which brought $8,000 from Ron and Etsel Maidens of Belleville.

Farmers To Converge On Washington

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — About 200 members of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) will converge on Washington D.C., Wednesday, March 6, to discuss priority farm issues with their congressmen, announced PFA President Keith Eckel.

Eckel said the meetings and other activities will take place during PFA's annual National Legislative Tour, March 6-7. "Our members will be meeting with lawmakers to personally convey the grassroots policy positions of our organization on important issues affecting agriculture," Eckel said.

Among issues that PFA leaders will be discussing with Pennsylvania's 23 U.S. representatives and two senators are the following:

Due to widespread concern in the dairy industry over price levels and volatility and the need to finalize a plan to limit government surplus purchases as required by the 1990 farm bill, both the House and Senate will be holding hearings on the dairy issue this spring. PFA will be urging legislators to oppose any attempts to re-open the 1990 farm bill or efforts to impose mandatory supply management programs for dairymen. PFA supports dairy provisions of the 1990 farm bill which should continue returning the dairy industry to a supply-demand balance.

Hearings are underway on a five-year $89.1 billion highway spending proposal. Current federal highway spending will expire on Sept. 30. PFA will be urging Congressmen to support prompt consideration of the highway funding bill so that agriculture can continue to rely on good, safe roads and bridges in the years ahead.

In response to legislation and regulations which affect private property rights such as wetlands regulations, environmental restrictions and other infringements, PFA will be asking legislators to support the Private Property Rights Act of 1991. S. 50, sponsored by Sen. Symms (R-ID) and Boren (D-OK) would require federal agencies to consider the impact of their rules and regulations on private property under the "takings" clause of the U.S. Constitution. Under S. 50, federal agencies would be required to assess the potential impact of their regulatory actions and minimize the transgression of property rights.

PFA will be asking Pennsylvania's congressional delegation to support legislation to expand the health insurance tax deduction for the self-employed from 25% to 100% and to make it permanent. PFA leaders will also be voicing opposition to any new tax increases and to efforts by the Bush Administration to establish an income means test for farm program payments.

The government's wetlands protection efforts continue to be a controversial issue for farmers, landowners and businessmen. PFA members will be urging support for legislation to exclude all prior converted agricultural land from federal wetlands regulation. PFA is also seeking to amend the wetlands provisions of the Clean Water Act so that a realistic, practical definition of wetlands is established. PFA will also urge legislators to oppose the Bush Administration's "no net loss" wetlands policy and will recommend compensation for landowners deprived the economic use of their lands due to wetlands regulation.

PFA is a voluntary, statewide farm organization representing 22,600 families in 54 county associations. It is affiliated with the nation's largest general farm organization, the 3.9 - million member American Farm Bureau Federation.

Pseudorabies Meeting Set

Lancaster County and progress in vaccination programs. Dr. Larry Hutchinson, Penn State Extension veterinarian, will discuss the use of gene-deleted vaccines.

"Designing a Control Plan" for your farm will be the topic presented by Dr. Robert Graybill while Dr. Tim Trayer relates economic data from pseudorabies field studies. Both Graybill and Trayer are local swine veterinarians.

As many of you know, PRV is a viral disease affecting pigs and other mammals. It is caused by a herpes virus which affects the central nervous system. The disease causes abortion and even death in swine and has become a serious threat to that swine industry since the mid-1970s.

The presence of the disease is most often found in areas of intensive hog production, such as northern Lancaster County, where more than 100 quarantines are now in effect. However, a high percentage of these herds are being vaccinated in a control/eradication program mapped out by a "producer" PRV advisory committee. Several vaccines are available for the prevention of PRV and new gene-deleted vaccines are able to discriminate an infected pig from a vaccinated one.

Your Farm Credit Banker. Nobody Knows The Field Better.

Sure, you'll find Farm Credit bankers all buttoned up, ready to talk short- or long-term loans, mortgages and sophisticated lines of credit.

But underneath the shirt and tie, you'll find the one thing the other banks don't offer: A fellow farmer.

Most Farm Credit loan officers were born and raised on farms and got their college degrees from ag schools. Nearly all of them grew up with 4-H and the Future Farmers of America.

And, if that's not enough, every single one of our loan officers goes through the toughest ag lending training program in America.

That means when you talk to a Farm Credit loan officer about any kind of ag loan, you won't have to waste your time translating to someone who's book smart but farm foolish.

What's more, because Farm Credit loan officers understand farming as well as they understand finances, they're not only smarter, they're faster. After all, they have the same loan closing authority as many local bank presidents.

So when you need competitive rates or creative options, see your local Farm Credit banker. Because nobody knows the field better.

Winter Rations Change Means Sodium Bicarbonate Gains

BREESE, Ill. — Late-winter ration changes forced by dwindling feed inventories and changing forage quality may disrupt rumen function in dairy cows, according to Dr. Mike Hutjens, dairy extension specialist at the University of Illinois.

"Producers can minimize this problem by making sure they have enough sodium bicarbonate in the ration," he said during an interview while in Breese last month for Illinois Dairy Days.

Sodium bicarbonate stabilizes rumen pH, keeping it in the optimum range of 6.2 to 6.8. If the pH falls below this range, a lower butterfat test can occur, as well as a decrease in dry matter intake followed by reduced milk production.

Adding grain or silage to a ration in late winter to compensate for a lack of high-quality forage is one way this can happen, Hutjens said. Feeding additional grain to rumen microorganisms accustomed to higher forage levels shifts rumen fermentation, leading to excess propionic acid production.

"It is currently cheaper to add corn when hay or forage becomes scarce than to buy additional high-quality hay. Making sure there is enough bicarb in the ration will help prevent a resulting pH drop."

Even if the grain level is not adjusted, rumen acidity can be affected by other changes, he added. Silages and haylages near the bottom of conventional upright silos are not identical to those nearer the top.

"As you get closer to the bottom of the silo, two things can happen," he explained. "First, the feed may be more acidic due to increased fermentation. Second, it may have been made from a less mature crop, which means higher moisture, less fiber, and a finer chop."

This silage's higher acid content comes from an increase in fermentation caused by a combination of higher moisture levels (affected by seepage as well as crop maturity) and higher pressures at the silo bottom. More acid in the feed means more acid loading in the rumen, lowering the pH.

"A less mature crop may also result in a finer chop," he added. "Smaller particle sizes lower the effective fiber level, reducing rumination and cud chewing."

Chewing stimulates the flow of saliva, a source of sodium bicarbonate and the cow's natural buffering agent. Less cud chewing, therefore, increases the need for additional rumen buffering.

Sodium bicarbonate should be fed daily at the level of 1.5 percent of the grain ration, or .8 ounces for every 10 pounds of milk produced.

"This is the level we recommend feeding throughout the year, not only during the winter," says Dr. Kenneth Cummings, Director of Research at Church & Dwight Co., Inc. "However, the ration changes you might be making while waiting for the pastures to turn green make it doubly important to make sure you're feeding enough."

ADADC Annual Meeting Spotlights Ads

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — "Everybody Knows That Milk's For Babies." Milk drinkers across America know different — milk's for them too!

That's the message of the new television advertising campaign for American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc. (ADADC) unveiled at the organization's 31st Annual Meeting, Feb. 19 at the Sheraton Inn, in Liverpool.

Specifically titled "Definitions," the ads challenge the perception that milk is just for babies.

As Michele Martens, director of Advertising and Promotions at ADADC said, "The three 30-second spots show baby boomers nonchalantly posing for portraits to show the health benefits of drinking milk: strong bones, bright smiles, and soft skin." The campaign was developed by D'Arcy, Masius, Benton & Bowles in Chicago.

Visually, the 1991 ads are a striking departure from earlier campaigns. The high-spirited and fun-loving spots are aimed at a slightly older audience than previously targeted. Distinctive music is used to capture the viewers' attention.

ADADC's media advertising programs provide the groundwork for its comprehensive marketing program for milk and dairy products. Milk and cheese are the dairy product priorities and are advertised primarily through television, radio and outdoor billboards.

Over 200 people, representing dairy industry leaders from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, attended the meeting and viewed the commercials. They also received an update on other ADADC promotion programs.

Ethanol Will Triple

sion" of ethanol demand throughout the country in 1992. And already, auto manufacturers, particularly Chrysler, have specified ethanol blends for the cars they manufacture.

"Clearly, ethanol is going to enjoy a marketplace advantage," he said. Ethanol is also being used on 10 buses in Peoria, Illinois), according to Dave Drennan, National Corn Growers Association (NCGA), at the conference.

15 years old

If you're considering trading in your farm tractor, it might be a good idea to wait until the equipment is at least 15 years old, and only do so if you will be working many more acres.

Commonsense approaches to sizing machinery to fit your farm were explained during one session of the 1991 Pennsylvania Corn Conference on Thursday.

Dr. Howard Doster, professor of ag economics at Purdue University, explained to about 50 farmers the need to consider all factors before deciding what type of farm machinery is needed.

"If you're buying the same size and type machine, the best time to replace (it) is about as follows: combines, 10 years; planters, 7 years; tractors, 15 years," Doster said. The conclusions, according to Doster, are based on analyses prepared using the Purdue Machinery Cost Calculator.

Huge increase

But farmers shouldn't buy a new tractor simply because they want one. They should buy only if they are going to be managing a huge increase in acreage in their operation and if they have the cash along with a good deal. And "you don't want to get any bigger machine than you need," he said.

If not, a tractor should be kept until it is worn out, according to Doster. In many cases, by increasing acreage work force and time, or other management strategies, farmers can work the extra acres.

A lot of the problem encountered by managing extra acres is the fact that there are "tremendous differences in performance" from one farmer to the other.

A huge range exists at any given time from one farm operation to the other in terms of bushels of corn harvested, even if the soil, seed, chemicals, and management strategies are the same, according to Doster.

Ethanol will nearly triple in production in the next four years, according to Bob Dinneen, legislative director of the Renewable Fuels Association, at the Pennsylvania Corn Conference.

Dr. Howard Doster, professor of ag economics at Purdue University, explained to about 50 farmers the need to consider all factors before deciding what type of farm machinery is needed.

Differences

"Tremendous differences exist among the people in any township in terms of their present material resources," he said. "Differences also exist in their personal skills, and in their goals for using what they now have to get what they now want most."

By knowing their equipment and what it can do, and by keeping machinery, labor, and family living costs in mind, farmers can get maximum benefit from their operation.

"By double-shifting the use of one set of equipment, they can use smaller equipment compared to operating the machinery fewer hours per day," he said. "Farmers may have the necessary skills to realize both labor cost savings and machinery cost savings by double-shifting large machinery on a large acreage."

Farmers should simply understand their present position carefully before competing for others for additional land, he said.

Net profits

Doster spoke about the factors affecting net profits beyond management, including weather, the farm layout itself, crop mix, machinery and labor costs, crop prices and land tenure, and risk and uncertainty issues (vulnerability of the manager toward possible adverse situations).

Also at the conference, new uses for corn were discussed, including the starches going into making biodegradable products (such as a new peanut packing material with 95 percent corn starch that dissolves in water).

Milk Market Is Topic

WILLIAMSPORT (Lycoming Co.) — The Eastern Young Cooperators, the young farmer group of Eastern Milk Producers cooperative, will sponsor an informational meeting March 11 here to discuss the volatile Northeast milk market and how national politics is impacting local farm operations.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. Monday in the Genetti Hotel and Convention Center.

The featured speaker will be Bill Perry, a government affairs specialist who spends much of his time in Washington, D.C. for Milk Marketing Inc., an Ohio-based dairy cooperative.

Wife Takes Charge Of Farm

Sue Vought with another farm chore that must be done while husband Robert is away at war.

During his bus departure, Sue says that she and the children complied with Bob's advice and did not wait to watch his bus leave from the Cumberland, Maryland depot. Sue believes that since she and the children went directly home, it made the parting easier than if she had stayed to wave goodbye to the disappearing bus.

She said that almost three months had passed before checks began arriving from the Navy.

"I'm more fortunate than many wives," she said. "I used his vacation pay and some milk checks to help pay the bills."

Bob has held his civilian job for 16 years. He has been in the Naval Reserves for the same number of years. During his initial tour of active duty after being drafted, Bob served in the Vietnam military campaign.

Unknown to Sue, Bob had secretly prepared for his expected departure. He had contacted the local lime company to spread lime on the land and he had also contacted the county extension office about rations for the dry cows.

Sue sounds like a born farmer. "I like it a lot," she said. "I like being my own boss, setting my own hours, and I don't need a babysitter."

In her opinion, farming is an excellent life for raising children. The children are all in 4-H. Sonya said that she detests barnwork, but her brother Josh is a big help with the barnwork.

"We don't have electric stall cleaners so we have to shovel by hand," said Sue.

"I think there are ups and downs in every job," she added, "but we have more ups than downs."

Winter in Somerset County has been relatively mild and Sue is grateful for that. Still, she occasionally enlists the help of male relatives to get hay for the cows.

The cows are dry now, but in April, Sue expects to start milking again. The family is optimistic that Bob will return home by July.

York Holstein Barn Meeting Planned

YORK (York Co.) — A barn meeting at the Earl Furhman and sons dairy operation kicks off the year's lineup of activities being planned by the York County Holstein Association.

The Furhman family will host the annual spring barn meeting on March 14 beginning at 7:30 p.m., at their farm near Hanover. Holstein members and guests attending the meeting will have the opportunity to tour the Furhman's new dairy facilities. A program on cow body scoring and conditioning will be presented by Pete Knutsen of the Pennfield Corporation.

Other events planned by the association's board of directors include a bus tour to Bedford and Blair counties on March 25 and the county Holstein show on July 26. A summer picnic is tentatively set for August 6 at the Heindel dairy farm near Airville. Annual meeting and dinner is planned for October.

York Holstein officers for 1991 are Leroy Bupp, Seven Valleys, president, Scott Cooper, Delta, vice-president and state director, and Gloria Shaffer, York, secretary-treasurer. Other directors are Dale Doll, Glen Rock, Frank Feeser, Hanover, Melvin Marks, Airville, Keith Shaffer, Seven Valleys, Roy Thompson, East Berlin, and Troy Zirkle, Manchester.

Committee appointments include: Jennie Hess and Leroy Bupp, tour; Sue Beshore, milk promotion; June Boyer and Joyce Bupp, publicity; Gloria Shaffer, chairman, and Scott Cooper, youth; Melvin Marks, advertising; and sales representatives, Shirley Trimmer and Melvin Marks. Keith Shaffer chairs the barn meeting committee, with Jennie Hess and Frank Feeser. Show committee includes Roy Thompson, chairman, Gloria Shaffer, Sue Beshore, Scott Cooper and June Boyer. Banquet committee appointments are Troy Zirkle, chairman, Frank Feeser and Gloria Shaffer. Picnic chairman is Melvin Marks, assisted by Scott Cooper and Dale Doll.

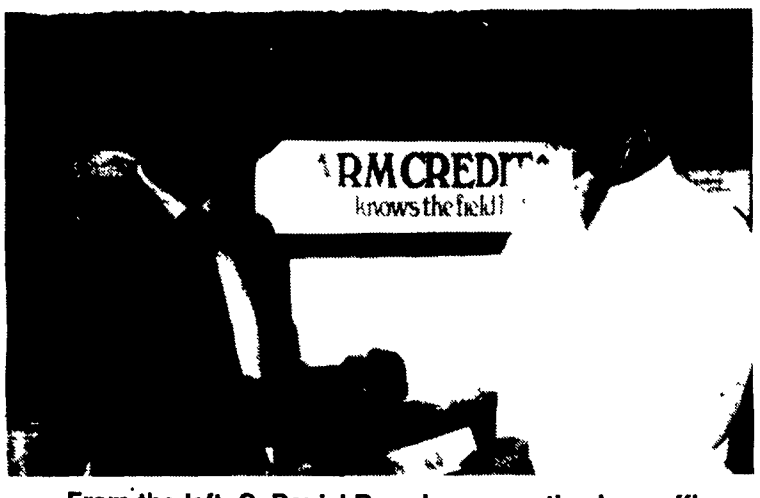
York Farm Credit Provides Prizes



From the left, C. Daniel Brogdon, executive loan officer for York Farm Credit present $100 to Jere Hissong Jr. during Franklin County Dairy Days.

YORK (York Co.) — York Farm Credit, ACA showed its appreciation to all Franklin County dairy farmers by giving away four $100 cash prizes at Franklin County Extension's Dairy Day.

Winners were: Chester Meyers, Greencastle; Marcus Martin, Mercersburg; Darrell Zimmerman, Greencastle; and Jere Hissong, Jr., Greencastle.

York Farm Credit, the largest ag lender in Franklin County, provides over $25 million in long, short, and intermediate term loans to local farmers. York Farm Credit serves farmers in Franklin, Fulton, Perry, Cumberland, Adams and York Counties. In addition to loans, this farmer-owner cooperative offers leasing, records and tax services to its members.

Warren County Dairy Day

WARREN (Warren Co.) — The annual Warren County Dairy Day is to be held March 14, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., in the 4-H Center of the Warren County Fairgrounds.

According to James Cowden, extension agent, the day's program will have topics on milk pricing, linear evaluation of dairy cows, chain saw safety, and the 1990 Farm Bill.

Several proposals have been made to the federal orders on marketing milk. Milk Marketing Inc. has made a proposal to price milk on its components- fat, protein, etc. Mr. James Sleper, staff economist at MMI, will be addressing the aspects of this proposal and how it may help local dairy farmers.

One method to determine a dairy cow's production potential is to evaluate it on type. This includes scoring of the cow's udder, body, foot and leg, and dairy form. Mr. Steve Moff, dairy program specialist of Coba Select Sires Inc., will be discussing udder composite scoring and other linear evaluation techniques.

Mr. William "Buzz" Paris Sr., safety engineer of Nortim Corporation, will be giving a chain saw safety demonstration. He will present information on safety clothing, proper chain saw technique, tree felling procedures, and saw maintenance. Since about every dairy farmer has used a chain saw on occasion, this will be a very educational demonstration.

New legislation was established with the passage of the 1990 Farm Bill. A milk price support floor of $10.10 per hundredweight of milk has been set for the next five years. The deficit reducer is an assessment fee of 5 cents per hundredweight in 1991 and 11.25 cents per hundredweight in 1992-1995. This assessment will be deducted from producers' milk checks. The brighter side is this fee may be refunded if a producer can prove that his or her milk production has not increased from the previous year's level.

Those interested in having lunch should make reservations before March 8, 1991. For more information and a brochure, contact the Warren County Cooperative Extension office.

York Co. Agent Debrosky Retires

YORK (York Co.)— Anthony G. Dobrosky (Tony), County Extension Director and livestock agent announced his retirement from Penn State Cooperative Extension effective July 1, 1991.

Tony has been in the extension service since July 1958. He graduated from Elders Ridge High School in 1948, entered Penn State in 1953, went into the service and returned to Penn State to graduate in Animal Husbandry in 1958. He was on temporary assignment as a swine fieldman for the American Berkshire Association before starting in York County Extension July 1958.

Tony has organized the York County Swine Association and the York County Sheep and Wool Growers. He was instrumental in starting the South Central Pennsylvania Cattleman's Association which conducts a feeder calf sale in November. Tony has also helped to start the York County Sheep Field Day and Sale. Many of the associations have been prime movers of promotional events which are aimed at educating the consumer. The pork and beef associations combine talents to sell sandwiches which has been widely accepted by the public.

Tony has managed the staff of 18 at the extension office since 1983 when he became county extension director. The extension office has been fully computerized since 1983. Each staff member has a computer which will become even more valuable in the future as more farmers secure their own computers to assist in their farm management.

Tony Debrosky

York County's agriculture preservation program has been one of the top in the state. Tony was instrumental in helping 25 townships and 1 borough start an Ag Security Area with over 104,000 acres signed up. York County had a tax reassessment in 1987; many farmers were educated about the Clean and Green program and now many are signed into this program.

Tony was very helpful in getting the York County Ag Preservation Board appointed the he assisted with the details in getting the program approved. He was also one of the charter members who established the York County Farmland Trust which is a private, non-profit trust that will provide a means of preserving agriculture land.

The York County Chamber of Commerce Agri-Business committee has a busy agenda of conducting an Ag Recognition Banquet and Farm Visitation Day which he co-chairs. He also lends a hand with the Farm-City Exchange Day and the Ag Business Tour. Tony has worked with the township officials in zoning and other ag related programs. For example, sewage sludge application is a concern he has worked on with the Solid Waste Authority, township officials and farmers.

Tony's 4-H involvement has been extensive, with 11 state winning livestock judging teams and one national winning team. Tony was very interested in 4-H meats judging and has coached 16 winning state teams, and 1 national winning team. Four of the members have been top individuals in the national contest, and York County teams have never placed below 7th at the national level. He also coached 5 state winning horse judging teams.

Tony and his wife, Pat, have 2 daughters. Lisa Hartman, Danville, is married to Dave Hartman, who is an extension agent in Columbia County. Daughter Laurie at State College is director of the Friends of 4-H Program. Tony and Pat live on a 29-acre farm near Glen Rock and raise Dorset and Southdown sheep.

Tony says he will stay involved in the ag business areas, but at a lot slower pace.

Lebanon Center To Hold Open House

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — The opening of the Lebanon Valley Agricultural Center in October of last year ended a 10-year process to co-locate the Extension Service and USDA agencies that would serve the rural residents of Lebanon County from a central location.

To celebrate the completion of this facility a dedication service will be held at the Center on Friday, March 15 at 1 p.m. and will continue with an open house for the public until 8 p.m. that evening, and fropm noon until 4 p.m. on Saturday.

The open house will provide an opportunity for the public to meet the staff of the Ag Center which includes the Lebanon VAlley Exposition Corporation, the Penn State Cooperative Extension Service, thbe Lebanon County Conservation District, the Soil Conservation Service, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, and the Farmers Home Administration which serves Dauphin and Lebanon Counties.

Each office will provide educational programs including exhibits, and slide and videotape presentations to inform visitors of the services extended by these agencies.

The site for the new office building became available with the sale of an 8-acre parcel of land held by Violet Shenk along Cornwall Road, one mile south of Lebanon, to the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds in June 1989.

Construction of the 12,000 square foot brick colonial building commenced during March 1990 by contractor Gene Kreitzer of Fredericksburg and was completed in September of that year.

The Lebanon Valley Agricultural Center is jointly owned by the Lebanon Valley Exposition Corporation and the Lebanon County Commissioners with an approximate cost of $650,000 that was financed through Peoples Bank of Lebanon.

DOEBLER'S ALFALFAS

Don't nickel and dime new seedings

by Willard Jones

Ever figure the cost of alfalfa seed per ton of hay?

Penn State recently did some cost accounting for Pennsylvania Alfalfa Growers Program.

Amazingly, establishment cost was only $6.50 per ton when prorated over the 4.3 year life of the stands. That covered seed, fertilizer, spray materials and other direct costs.

Actual seed cost was nickel and dime stuff. A mere $2.04 per ton.

This bookkeeping proves one thing. It's not the seed price that is important. It's how the alfalfa performs over the long haul. And no alfalfas do better than the new Doebler's Precedent and Starmaster. Here's why:

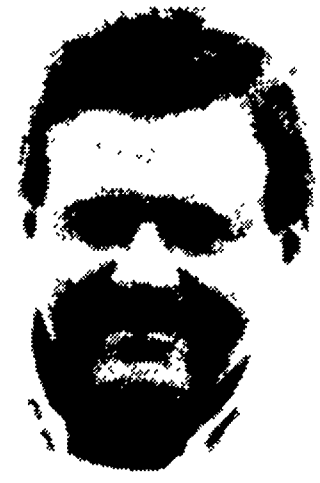
Winter hardiness for longer stands. Both have top ratings. But Starmaster has slight edge in short season country.

Disease resistance. Both resistant to the big five diseases. Precedent also resistant to a new killer, Aphanomyces.

Insect resistance. Starmaster shows moderate resistance to leaf hopper and pea aphid. Precedent shrugs off spotted alfalfa aphid.

Tonnage. Nothing average here. Starmaster and Precedent regularly finish among top 10 in Eastern trials. And they win their share of firsts and seconds.

Watch these Eastern alfalfas go to work for you in 1991.



I'm Willard Jones, Doebler's sales manager, suggesting you think performance rather than price per pound when buying alfalfa seed.

Satellite Aims For Corn Profits

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Helping farmers to optimize inputs for maximum profitability is the goal of a crop production seminar to be televised live via satellite in at least three Pennsylvania locations on March 5. The event is being produced at University Park by Penn State's College of Agriculture.

"The seminar will focus on the optimum use of inputs such as fertilizers and pesticides in the crop production system," said Dr. Al Turgeon, head of the agronomy department. "We want to help farmers to achieve their profitability objectives while minimizing environmental consequences."

The seminar will be divided into three one-hour segments. The first program will feature soil properties and fertility. Dr. Raymond Shipp, associate professor of agronomy, will cover soil depth, drainage, texture and slope. Dr. Douglas Beegle, associate professor of agronomy, will discuss soil testing, managing nutrients, and the interaction of nutrients with other inputs.

The second hour will focus on cropping systems. Lynn Hoffman, senior research associate in agronomy, will discuss soil compaction and its effect on crop growth and nutrient utilization. Dr. Marvin Hall, assistant professor of forage management, will talk about forage production, the effect of soil capabilities on species selection, and harvest techniques. Dr. Gregory Roth, assistant professor of corn management, will cover corn crop planning, hybrid selection and other considerations.

Pest management will be the subject of the last program. Dr. John Ayers, professor of plant pathology, will explain plant diseases and the factors that affect their development. Dr. Dennis Calvin, assistant professor of entomology, will provide information on controlling corn insects. Dr. Arthur Hower, professor of entomology, will discuss the control of alfalfa insects. Dr. William Curran, assistant professor of weed science, will present an effective weed management strategy.

Each program will consist of 40 minutes of presentations and a 20-minute question-and-answer session. Audience members will be able to interact with the Penn State specialists via phone.

The seminar will be shown simultaneously at The Milton S. Hershey Medical Center, Penn State Hazleton Campus, and Pennsylvania College of Technology in Williamsport. The event also will be distributed nationally through the AG*SAT educational network, and may be televised at other Penn State commonwealth campuses.

For more information or to register, contact the site coordinator of the nearest seminar location: Paul Craig (Hershey), (717) 921-8803; Norm Conrad (Williamsport), (717) 524-8721; and Donna Grey (Hazleton), (717) 825-1701.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Every week our daughter who lives in Georgia phones us and talks for one-half an hour. We hear what our granddaughters are doing and how her week has gone. We also hear that she has planted her garden and that the daffodils are blooming.

Now I enjoy hearing from her but all year long, she can tell me that her peas, beans or whatever are ready to eat while mine are only blooming. There is a certain rivalry between gardeners and I can never win as they are in a warmer climate. But, I did have some yellow crocuses bloom the beginning of February. Another daughter lives near the New York state border, her flowers and vegetables are later than mine. So, maybe that compensates for the early ones down South.

My husband has gone on a woodworking spree. At least, he is purchasing new and used machines most every week. I haven't seen anything that he has made as yet. But, he talks of building a bookcase. Our present shelves are overflowing and there are several boxes on the attic that contain old books from his parents.

Our house is always getting a new supply of books. For Christmas my son gave me some books on birds, flowers and trees. These are very complete works published by "The Audubon Society" for North America. Each one contains color pictures and has over a thousand pages. Anything you want to know can be found in these pages.

I've always been interested in nature and years ago I took my sisters, who were thirteen and fourteen years younger than I, on Sunday walks. Then fifteen years later, my own children shared the same pleasures in a meadow with wooded hillsides.

Berks Society 5

The February meeting of Berks County Society of Farm Women Group 5 was held February 11 at the home of Mrs. Frieda Keppley, Womelsdorf. Seventeen members responded to roll call by answering what they do to be "heart smart".

Dr. Lori Pfeifer from Willow Creek Animal Hospital spoke about Lyme Disease. At the conclusion of her presentation, Dr. Pfeifer distributed pamphlets to each member elaborating on Lyme Disease in Pennsylvania.

The meeting continued with information and plans concerning the Mother-Daughter lunch at the American House in May. The Spring Rally will be held on May 23, at the Berkshire/Sheraton Hotel at a cost of $12 per person. Ag Business Day will be March 28, with contributions being made to the Food Bank. A list of names of Service personnel serving in Saudi Arabia were distributed so that members would be able to send notes of encouragement and good wishes. Other dates to keep in mind are October 5, County Convention; Scenic River Days, July 24-28.

Our next meeting will be held at Anna Moyer's residence who will be hosting Mr. Tom Heck from Heck Bros., a florist who will demonstrate arranging flowers in a spring basket.

Patz® slide of COR-TEN® steel resists corrosion

COR-TEN steel provides atmospheric corrosion resistance for longer slide life.

Patz COR-TEN steel slides are painted to further protect against corrosion. COR-TEN steel holds paint longer than ordinary steel. If the paint is scratched, COR-TEN steel forms a tightly adherent oxide to "heal" itself.

COR-TEN steel is stronger than mild steel. The COR-TEN steel slide is welded to a 4½-inch by 6⅝-inch COR-TEN center box beam for extra rigidity.

The COR-TEN steel return slide lip is standard equipment. It helps keep the area clean.

Patz can build slides to various widths and lengths. Ask your Patz dealer for details.

Ask your Patz dealer about the 10-year warranty on COR-TEN steel slides.

COR-TEN is a registered trademark of U.S. Steel Corp.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Despite squinting eyelids, the anticipated phenomenon couldn't be seen.

Then again, maybe it was just a "sense, an expectation, that kept my eyes scanning skyward for the usual sign. After all, the moon was out, but beginning to be faintly clouded over. Dampness hung in the air. Everything was right for it. And the weather forecasts were dropping ominous hints.

Minutes later, the sky having darkened to a full blackness of night, there it was, standing out in the theatre of the heavens like a glaring spotlight.

"Did you see the ring around the moon?" I asked The Farmer as he returned from moving heifer groups. "It's giant; absolutely humongous."

Mentally, a list checkoff started. Shovel. Salt. Blanket. Coveralls, gloves, boots. The first time I ever recall seeing such a huge, impressive ring around the moon was followed hours later by one of the heaviest snowfalls of recent years.

In less than 36 hours, it would be necessary to depart for an overnight trip. With such a spectacular bad-weather warning like the one circled overhead, there was no way this driver would back one tire out of the garage without a truckful of emergency road provisions.

Never mind that the last several times I've seen such a moon ring the expected bad weather never materialized. Okay, so even Mother Nature mixes her signals on occasion. But isn't it interesting how we condition ourselves to respond to certain stimuli, even after just one memorable experience.

A red light burns round-the-clock just inside the glass-windowed storm doors on the milk house entrance. Hooked to the milk tank cooling compressor, the steady red glow is an "all's well" signal that the milk is cold. Should it start warming, the light begins to flash.

Seeing the milkhouse pitch black at night sends us literally running to the barn to determine what failed. Fortunately, it has usually been just a bad bulb. Fear of lost livelihood - spoiled milk in our case - is a powerful response stimulus.

Solomon's steady barking similarly sends us hustling to the door to investigate who or what is stirring around the farmstead. Few visitors miss his noisy attention. And, he's alerted us several times to meandering heifers or a loose cow out snitching feed. He barks, we check. Classic conditioning.

Honking horns, a ringing telephone, a bawling cow, a crying child - all catch our attention and push our response buttons. And those little, everyday responses offer lots of insight into us as individuals.

The sight of dry soil in a single houseplant sends me trucking to every windowsill, water container in hand. I suffer from a severe psychological defect - the inability to water just one plant. This response stems, no doubt, from lingering guilt over having neglected a few in my time.

Having gotten caught short a couple of times over the years on kindling to start the wood stove, I'm a conditioned branch-and-twig-picker-upper. This response is actually a multi-beneficial one, offering a cleaner lawn, less wear and tear on the mower blades, happiness to the dog who thinks my sole purpose in life is to throw sticks for him to "fetch," plus the physical benefits of frequent bending exercise.

Conditioning also sends us bending for bottles and cans tossed along our roadsides. This response is fueled by the adrenalin of anger at slobs conditioned to believe the whole world is their trash can.

Food is a powerful response conditioner. I have, before potpourri became so popular, simmered cloves to replace less pleasant cooking odors. "What are you baking?" was the invariable question of smiling anticipation, followed by the grumbling of disappointment at no freshly-baked cookies.

And, after finding missing some special treats I'd recently purchased, I accosted the obvious culprit with a vocal chewing out.

"Mom," was the grinning, conditioned response. "I figure anything I find in the house that's edible is fair game for eating."

This Mom is now conditioning herself to hide things better.

Cambria Society

Lois Hughes was the guest of honor at a meeting of the Cambria County Society of Farm Women. It was a surprise party held February 7 at the Cambria County Cooperative Extension office, Ebensburg.

Agricultural, Industrial Museum Becomes Reality

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Belts turn, motors hum, and old equipment of wood and metal creaks into action. The shrill shriek of a factory whistle echoes off brick walls steeped in local history.

What has been a vision for some years by far-sighted community leaders is fast becoming reality as the Agricultural and Industrial Museum of York County readies for public opening within months.

York's agriculture and industrial roots are deep and varied, comprising a rich and historic heritage. A museum to showcase York's considerable contributions to the nation's agricultural and industrial development already has some displays of equipment set up and functioning. At completion, two sites will house the collections, the old Eastern Market, and the Motter Building.

The idea for such a museum in York originated with David Carver, head of the York County Industrial Development Authority, according to current museum director C. Warren Smith.

"David Carver was in the Midwest in 1987 and saw a museum along this order. There are not too many hands-on, industrial museums," says Smith.

Carver helped organize a core of interested York-area business and community leaders to serve as the founding board. After visits to other museums and a period of preparing the "groundwork," the board had a feasibility study done last year that found a high level of community support for the museum.

Director Smith was ready to retire from the York Narrow Fabrics firm about the same time the board was searching for a director. He fit the board's vision of an initial director, not a curator but a business person knowledgeable of the York community.

Board member John Zimmerman encouraged the expansion of the museum's scope to include agriculture along with industry, according to Smith. Robert Vogel, an honorary director who recently retired from his work with the Smithsonian Institute, and Dennis Zembala, curator and director of the Baltimore Industrial Museum, have been invaluable with their assistance, Smith says.

Initial displays are set up in the old Eastern Market building, at 470 East Market Street, where generations of farmers sold produce to their town customers. The Market building was donated for the museum by Henry Houser. Though renovated to meet modern safety standards, the Eastern Market Building retains the distinctive character of the old high-ceilinged farmers' market which opened in 1886. Eventually, only agricultural displays will be housed at the Eastern Market site.

Filling five bags of feed concurrently saved considerable time for millers adapting this turn-of-the-century bagging technology. Wooden augers moved the grain to the filling mechanism.

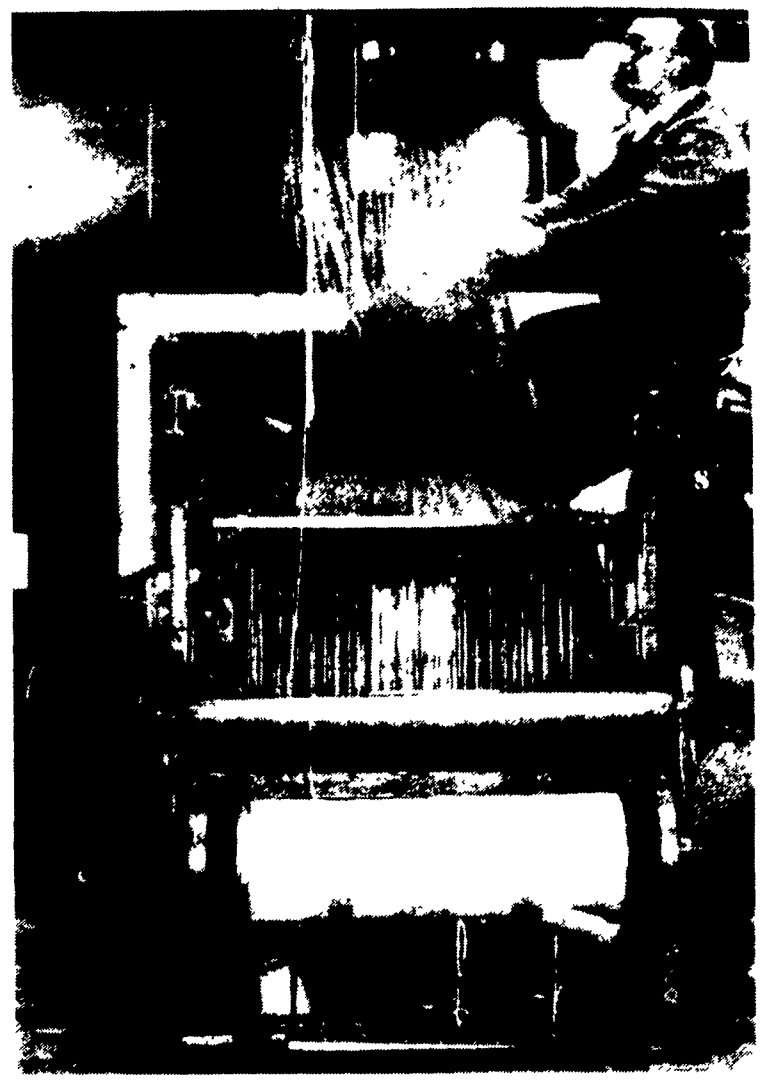
Industrial collections will be on display at the Motter Building, along the Codorus Creek and West Princess street. Renovation of the former printing operation, encompassing a half-dozen buildings, is slated to begin in 1992, with the first-phase restoration of some 20,000 square feet. Fires have plagued the empty mid-York facility, including a major one last May which left heavy roof damage.

"The 'transition' museum in the Old Eastern Market is three or four months ahead of schedule," Smith says with pride. Plans are for a July 4 public opening, to coincide with the 250th anniversary celebrating of the founding of the city of York.

"The museum will honor every man, woman, boy and girl, who ever toiled in a mine or factory, struggled behind a mule and plow, created a new product or service or fashioned a worthwhile thing with their hands," states a brochure compiled for the museum's current fundraising efforts. Response to initial fundraising efforts were so successful that the capital campaign goal was raised from $1.4 million to a $1.6 million level. Along with raising funds, museum founders are seeking contributions of artifacts for display.

Volunteers recently got a preview of the museum's displays of equipment of earlier times. Line shaft systems ran much of the manufacturing equipment of the day, with many machinery functions operated from a single power source. A line shaft system on display at the museum originated at the Prospect Street Tobacco Powder Mill, one of numerous tobacco-related firms in York's manufacturing history.

Water-powered mills were common in the county, handling and processing grains into foodstuffs for man and beast. A five-bag filling machine at the museum was built by miller Harry Cross for use in his Cross Mill. Grain was moved via wooden augers and into the mechanism, designed for the efficiency of filling five burlap sacks at the same time.



Weaver David Kline works on the intricate threading of the museum's Crompton-Knowles jacquard silk loom. Hand-punched cards were used to "tell" the machine how to weave the intricate patterns on the 1900's-era machine.

From the late 1800s to the beginning of World War I, some 17 automobile manufacturing companies operated in York. Among the beautifully-restored vintage vehicle is a 1929 Model A truck used for moving produce from the Rosemiller farm. A Bell Motor car housed at the museum, made in the early 1900s, is the only known one in existence today.

The working printing press on display is a replica of a Hall and Sellers press that belonged to Benjamin Franklin. When the Continental Congress fled Philadelphia to York in 1977, the original press followed. It's purpose was to print some $23 million dollars worth of Continental Currency authorized by Congress while it met in York, the nation's capital for nine months.

A small wooden model of the nation's first iron steamboat pays tribute to the role York played in transportation improvements. The "Codorus" was the first iron-clad steamboat, built with sheet iron fastened over the wooden frame. Purpose of the shallow-drafted craft was to navigate the Susquehanna River for shipping. One trip, in 1826, was made upriver into New York state. A Baltimore firm then purchased the Codorus, relocated it to Norfolk, Virginia, and it saw use in the Dismal Swamp and Clubfoot canals. The last record found of the craft is a sale announcement from a local 1830 newspaper, leaving historians with a blank ending to the Codorus saga.

In early February, Smith and volunteers undertook moving into the museum the Phineas Davis locomotive, on long-term loan from the B. & O. Railroad Museum in Baltimore. Phineas Davis made his mark in history in 1831, when he built the first practical coal-burning locomotive. His engine, the "York," was built at the Davis and Gardner establishment on the west side of the Codorus Creek.

Artifacts on display from York agricultural history feature such rural domestic items as cider presses and cream separators, as well as machinery including horse-drawn plows and tillage equipment.

"The better the condition they're in, the better they are for our use," affirms director Smith. "Refurbishing and reconstructing items as necessary will be done as much as possible in front of viewers."

"We want a grist mill," he cites as a top-of-the-list item. "And we're looking for large items, like an old combine. We need a Sheppard tractor; those were made in Hanover."

A Fitz waterwheel, so well balanced that it would turn with just a trickle of running water, is also near the top of the museum's "wish" list. Also needed is a full-size plastic cow, for use with a dairying display.

Owners of farm artifacts who are interested in cooperating with the Agricultural and Industrial Museum of York County should contact director C. Warren Smith, at the Old Eastern Market museum building, 470 East Market Street, York, PA 17403, or call 717-852-7007.

Dave Sheffler operates the York Industrial and Agriculture Museum's Hall and Sellers printing press. The press is a replica of one which belonged to Ben Franklin.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

If you have a sweet tooth, you'll like today's recipes. They're some really good ones that I've tested lately, but I couldn't fit them into "Microwave Minutes" columns. Rather than keep them for myself, I put them all together in one tempting package.

You don't have to be too upset about the calories in these recipes. None of the recipes are superhigh in fat content, and they contain lots of other valuable nutrients, besides sugar. Of course, none of these sweets have to be eaten in one sitting! In other words, enjoy them in moderation.

A little Caramel Fruit Dip goes a long way. It is served with slices of fresh crispy apples (such as a tart apple, like Granny Smith) or winter pears (such as Anjou). Make the dip ahead and serve it at room temperature. Reheating will thin it, which makes it perfect to pour over a dish of sliced fruit; but for dipping, a thicker (room temperature) consistency is best.

In Oat and Wheat Cracker Snacks, sweetness combined with lots of whole-grain goodness adds up to a wonderful taste. It's very hard to give an exact count of calories, fat, etc., because the amount of topping per cracker can vary considerably.

The topping for the crackers is easily made in your microwave, with no costant stirring or danger of burning. Finish the snacks in your microwave or your conventional oven. To me, microwaving is easier because batches of 15 take less than two minutes of microwaving, and I just keep using the same dish over and over. The only problem can be that the topping dries out and then it won't stay on the crackers. To prevent this, stir topping well or reheat it before using.

Chocolate Dumpling Dessert is a homey "comfort food" and a perfect warm winter dessert for chocolate fans who don't want too many calories. Be sure to add the dumplings as soon as the sauce is done, while its very hot, so the dumplings cook quickly and evenly. For perfect cooking, drop dumpling dough in small spoonfuls, put an upright drinking glass in the center, and cover with plastic wrap.

Caramel Fruit Dip

25-27 caramels (9¾-ounce package)
1 stick (½ cup) soybean-oil margarine
1 can (14 ounces) sweetened condensed milk

Unwrap caramels and place them in a microwavable 1-quart measure or bowl. Add margarine and about half of the undiluted milk. Microwave (High) 2 to 2½ minutes, stirring after 1 minute, or until caramels are soft when stirred. Stir until smooth and gradually stir in remaining milk. Microwave (High) 45 to 60 seconds; stir until smooth. Cool and serve as a dip with unpeeled, cored and sliced tart, crisp apples and/or firm winter pears. Cover and refrigerate leftovers. Serve at room temperature. Makes about 3 cups.

For individual servings: Make caramel sauce as above. Place sliced fruit in dessert dishes; pour caramel sauce over each. Or, cover and refrigerate sauce. To use, reheat for about 10 seconds per serving. (For thicker sauce, do not reheat). Pour over sliced fruit.

Each 2-tablespoon serving: 135 calories, 2g protein, 7g fat, 18g carbohydrate, 91mg sodium, 6mg cholesterol.

Oat and Wheat Cracker Snacks

About 60-75 square (2x2-inch) stone-ground wheat crackers
2 cups uncooked oatmeal (not instant)
½ cup wheat germ
½ cup sliced almonds
½ cup sunflower nuts
2 sticks (1 cup) soybean-oil margarine
1 cup packed brown sugar

Line a microwavable 8x12-inch baking dish with about 15 crackers; set aside. In a small bowl, combine oatmeal, wheat germ, almonds and sunflower nuts; set aside.

In a microwavable 2-quart measure or deep bowl, microwave margarine and brown sugar, bringing mixture to a full boil. (This takes about 3 minutes.) Boil 3 minutes. Fold in dry ingredients all at once. Place about a teaspoon of topping on each cracker. Microwave (High) 1 minute; rotate dish and microwave (High) 30 to 60 seconds longer or until mixture bubbles on crackers. Watch carefully: If necessary, remove crackers as they are done to prevent burning. Remove crackers to rack to cool. Repeat with remaining topping; stirring mixture before spooning atop crackers. (Or, if necssary to keep topping moist, microwave it for about 15 seconds and stir well.) Store snacks, tightly covered, in cool place. Makes about 60 to 75 snacks.

Each 2x2-inch cracker: 51 calories, 1g protein, 3g fat, 5g carbohydrate, 61mg sodium, 0 cholesterol.

Note: If you use larger crackers or bake them in the conventional oven (using more topping for each cracker), number of calories, etc., will be considerably different.

Conventional directions: Preheat oven to 350° F. Line a 10x15x1-inch jellyroll pan with about 36 to 40 crackers. In a medium saucepan, bring margarine and brown sugar to a full boil. Boil 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Spoon mixture on crackers; then spread evenly. Bake at 350° F 8 to 10 minutes. Do not overbake. Immediately remove to foil to cool. Store, tightly covered, in cool place. Makes about 40 pieces.

Chocolate Dumpling Dessert

⅔ cup packed brown sugar
¼ cup unsweetened cocoa
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 cups cold water
2 tablespoons soybean-oil margarine or butter
1 cut buttermilk biscuit mix (spooned into measure)
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
2 tablespoons powdered unsweetened cocoa
1 egg
1 tablespoon soybean-oil margarine or butter, melted
½ teaspoon vanilla extract.

Stir together brown sugar, ¼ cup cocoa, and cornstarch in a microwavable 2-quart round casserole. Gradually stir in water until smooth; add margarine. Microwave (High) 6 to 7 minutes, stirring after each 2 minutes, or until sauce is bubbly and slightly thick.

While sauce cooks, make dumplings by combining biscuit mix, granulated sugar, and 2 tablespoons cocoa in a small bowl. Altogether, add egg, melted margarine and vanilla; stir with fork until well-mixed. (Dough will be thick). Drop by about 8 small spoonfuls around edges of hot sauce, leaving center open. Set a small drinking glass upright in dish center. Cover with plastic wrap. Microwave (High) 3½ to 4½ minutes or until dumplings no longer look doughy on top (and when pulled apart with fork, inside parts are cooked). Serve warm in individual dishes, spooning sauce over dumplings. Refrigerate leftovers. May also be served cold. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Each serving — 1/8 of recipe: 214 calories, 3g protein, 8g fat, 34g carbohydrate, 250mg sodium, 27 mg cholesterol.

Drug, Food Combinations Produce Side Effects

WAYNE (Wayne Co.) — Some combinations of food and drugs can produce serious side effects. Some combinations impair the body's use of nutrients or diminish a drug's effectiveness. The following list provides some possible problems that can occur:

• Diuretics can promote the loss of potassium from the body; you would need to add extra potassium to your diet.

• Antacids containing aluminum hydroxide can reduce the absorption of phosphorous.

• Digoxin (prescribed for congestive heart failure) can diminish the appetite.

• Long-term aspirin use may promote chronic blood loss from the gastrointestinal tract.

• Dietary calcium (Drinking milk or eating cheese or yogurt) can reduce the absorption of tetracycline (an antibiotic).

• Soft drinks can cause some drugs to dissolve in the stomach, rather than in the intestines (where they're more easily absorbed into the blood).

• A combination of alcoholic beverages and depressants (tranquilizers, barbiturates, or painkillers) can dangerously slow performance skills, judgement and alertness.

What you can do to protect yourself? (1) Read the labels on prescription and over-the counter drugs. (2) Ask your doctor or pharmacy how a drug may react with foods and beverages. (3) Tell your doctor about any unusual symptoms. Following these suggestions should help prevent any serious consequences of mixing foods and drugs.

White Fudge

1⅓ cups white sugar
½ cup butter
⅔ cup non-dairy liquid coffee cream
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ pound white chocolate coating (wafers or block)
2 cups mini marshmallows
½ teaspoon vanilla

Cook first four ingredients without stirring to 238 degrees. Remove from heat and add the next three ingredients. Blend well. Pack into 9-inch square pan. When partially cool, cut into squares. Makes about 50 pieces.

Vanilla Fudge

3 tablespoons white syrup
3 cups white sugar
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ (7 grams) jar Marshmallow whip
2 heaping tablespoons peanut butter

Combine the syrup, sugar, and milk. Heat to soft ball stage, stirring most of the time.

Remove from the stove and add butter, vanilla, marshmallow whip, and peanut butter. Stir until it begins to thicken. Pour into buttered 8x10-inch baking dish. When cool, cut into squares.

½ cup chopped nuts
1 teaspoon vanilla
Coconut, optional

Combine sugar, salt, milk, and butter in a saucepan. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon. Cook to 240 degrees on candy thermometer. Remove from heat, stir in marshmallow cream, vanilla, and nuts. Pour into 8-inch square dish. Let stand until firm. Cut into squares.

ANSWER — A reader would like a recipe for seven grain cereal bread. Thanks to Mrs. Norman Brown of Clementon, N.J., for the following recipe.

Seven Grain Cereal Bread

2¾ -3¼ cups flour
3 cups graham flour
2 packages yeast
4 teaspoons salt
3 cups water
½ cup dark molasses
¼ cup oil
½ cup buckwheat flour
½ cup rye flour
½ cup soy flour
½ cup yellow cornmeal
½ cup quick rolled oats
Butter

In a large bowl, combine 1½ cups flour, 2 cups graham flour, yeast, and salt; mix well. In saucepan, heat water, molasses and oil until 120-130 degrees. Add to flour mixture. Blend at low speed until moistened; beat 3 minutes at medium speed. By hand, gradually stir in buckwheat, rye, and soy flours, cornmeal, rolled oats, remaining graham flour and enough all purpose flour to make a firm dough. Knead on floured surface for 5 to 8 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease teaspoon. Cover, let rise in warm place until double, about 1 hour.

Punch down. Divide in half. On lightly floured surface, shape each half into a round loaf. Place on greased cookie sheet. Cover, let rise in warm place until double, about 30 minutes. With sharp knife, make cross slash across the top of each loaf. Bake 375 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes. (If too dark, cover loosely with foil until last 5 to 10 minutes of baking). Remove from cookie sheet. Brush with butter; cool.

2. Microwave on high for 1 to 1½ minutes or until gelatine dissolves. Cool 5 minutes.

3. Beat eggs until light, about 5 minutes. Beat in yogurt, jelly, sugar, corn syrup, lemon juice and vanilla. Blend in milk mixture.

4. Cover with plastic wrap and freeze until ½ -inch around side of bowl is frozen (about 2 hours). Remove from freezer, beat with mixer, about 1 minute, scraping sides of bowl. Return to freezer and repeat freezing and beating.

Healthy Whipped Topping Developed

Ben Hardin
Everybody's Science

Dessert lovers take heart. You may look forward to indulging in a tasty whipped topping without feeling guilty about consuming excess calories, cholesterol or saturated fats.

A U.S. Department of Agriculture food technologist, George N. Bookwalter, invented a new low-fat, whipped-cream-like topping made from frozen milk concentrate. He replaced nearly all of the butterfat with small quantities of oils from sources such as soybean, corn or peanuts that are low in saturated fats.

The all-natural product takes up little freezer space and it's easy to prepare—just thaw, add flavorings and blend. Unlike presently available nondairy frozen toppings, Bookwalter says, the new formulation is so concentrated that a portion will produce eight times its volume when whipped.

Bookwalter found the whipped topping held its foaminess for up to 24 hours, in research at the National Center for Agricultural Utilization Research, Peoria, Ill. "By combining just the right ratio of nonfat dry milk to water, we didn't have to use emulsifiers or homogenizers to keep the oil from separating," he said.

Bookwalter, who recently retired, has applied for a patent on the whipped topping.

The new topping can be made with artificial sweeteners and could be ideal for people who have dietary restrictions, Bookwalter said. Also, the topping could be used on specialty desserts made with artificial sweetener and oatrim, a low-cholesterol fat substitute made from soluble oat fiber. Scientists at the research center recently patented oatrim, which contains cholesterol-fighting beta-glucan.

In contrast with real whipped cream, which contains about 6.5 grams of fat and 23 milligrams of cholesterol per half-cup serving, the new topping contains about 2 grams of fat and 2 milligrams of cholesterol.

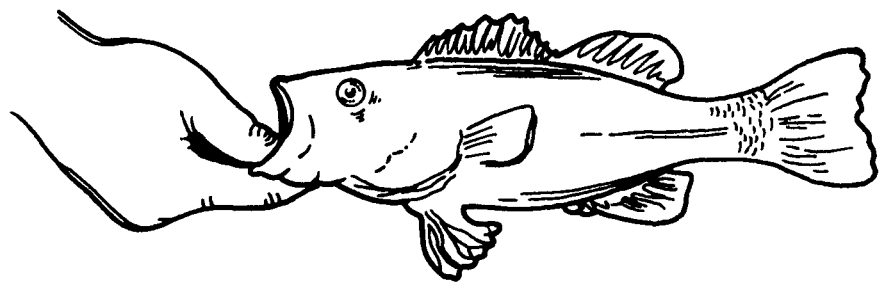
Catch a fish--fry it slow, otherwise--Let it go!



To release a toothless fish without hurting it, firmly hold the fish by putting your thumb inside the lower lip and forefinger outside. Remove the hook, by pushing it back the same way it went in. The first time you remove a hook from a fish with teeth, have someone who knows show you how.

Take a friend fishing by taking turns connecting two dots either across or down, not diagonally. The one who completes a square, initials it. Fish you keep are worth five points, while released fish are worth ten points. If you get a bite and miss, count two points for your effort. All other squares are worth one point. The person with the highest score wins.

Only Farm Credit Has Loan Officers Who Were Trained In The Field.

While you were growing up on the farm going to 4-H, FFA, maybe even AG school, do you know what your Farm Credit loan officer was doing?

Same thing.

Not many bankers can say that.

True, they can make loans nine ways to Sunday. But, now your Farm Credit loan officer can, too. Over the last few years our people have gone through extensive training at making every kind of farm loan imaginable. Now a Farm Credit loan officer can give you the lowdown on rates, options and creative financing as well as any city banker can.

And around here, our Farm Credit loan officers have the power of approval that's equal to most bank presidents.

So the next time you need to get a farm loan, think about this for just a moment.

Then let one of our Farm Credit loan officers prove to you what we've been saying all along. That bankers can't be farmers. But farmers can be bankers.

Is it economically, physically, and emotionally feastible for a widow to continue farming?

Widows: Can They Survive On The Family Farm

This is the first in a series of articles about widows who have faced the obstacles of surviving on the family farm.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MARIETTA (Lancaster Co.) — Because her husband had an up-to-date will and the property and equipment were listed jointly, Helen Wivell expected the legal transaction of her farm to go smoothly.

But month after month, her lawyer was vague and uncommunicative.

When the PFA's accountant offered to set up a meeting with the lawyer, Helen was grateful, but when the three gathered, the lawyer was again evasive.

The PFA accountant asked, "Can't you even answer a simple question such as how much will your services cost?

The lawyer hesitantly revealed that his fee was based on a percentage of the estate.

"The PFA accountant hit the roof," Helen recalled. He pounded his fist on the table and demanded a list of the lawyer's services.

In response to the accountant's anger, the lawyer lowered his fee. The accountant and Helen stressed the importance of a quick settlement so that Helen would not need to pay a tax penalty.

Lawyer's Unexpected Ploy

Finally, the lawyer called a meeting at Helen's bank. She was sho[illegible]d when she entered the conf[illegible] room to find her lawyer an[illegible] other men seated at the tabl[illegible] She was even more appalled to hear that the lawyer intended to sell out her estate to the businessmen who were there.

tioned the possibility of that happening previously," Helen said.

"Because we had two farms in our name, we also had two mortgages. We had owned the main farm for 10 years and the other for two years. We thought, we were just in our prime, when my husband died."

Now, that her husband had died, the lawyer decided her best recourse was to sell both farms.

Helen said, "I couldn't just sit there and let them sell my farms."

In desperation, Helen stood up and confronted the lawyer.

She recounted how that she and her husband had always worked hard to get what they had. Her husband had started out farming on the half with a second-hand tractor and a pair of mules. When he died, they had two farms totalling 250 acres with diversified crops and tobacco.

"I considered it a priviledge to work with my husband on the farm and believe that he had foresight in purchasing two adjoining farms," she said. She reminded the lawyer that the will stated that if the farms were sold, the sons should have first choice to buy the farms.

When the agribusinessmen heard Helen's side of the story, they got up and walked out of the conference room.

Helen believes that the lawyer intended to sell property and equipment because it is easier to deal with money than with estates.

She said, "Lawyers and banks get more money if you sell. They don't think of what's best for us. They think of the money."

Helen warns others who may be in similar situations, "Be on the alert. You need to assert yourself and not let others make decisions for you."

Helen Keeps Farms

Helen kept both farms in her name, and was comforted that her son Joe, who had just graduated from high school, would help her.

"The greatest loss a family can have is to lose a husband and best friend," she said.

"The loss of my husband was equally hard for Joe who would have preferred to work with his father; instead, he walked in his footsteps. I'm especially grateful to Joe's interest in farming and his leadership and farming accomplishments are often recognized by agricultural organizations."

Although her son has now taken over the farming operation and has purchased one of the farms, Helen continues helping with the barn and field work. She continues her ownership of the one farm.

Helen said, "In farming, you don't know the end results when you plant. You don't know what the weather or the marketing conditions will be, but my husband always accented the joys of life. He made everything an adventure, and that's what I attempt to do."

Because neither Helen nor her husband enjoyed bookkeeping, they did it together in the evenings.

"When we were finished working on the the books, my husband would usually close them and jokingly remark, 'If we didn't have debts, we wouldn't have much.'"

Then they would admire their beautiful farms near Marietta, and Helen recalled of those moments, "Even if we didn't have much money, we always felt we had the wealth of land."

Be flexible

When her husband passed away, Helen found it most difficult to continue the bookkeeping so she passed that chore to her son.

She advises, "You need to shift gears and wear different hats depending on what life brings your way."

Because she was involved in every angle of farming, it wasn't difficult for her to adjust to the hard work. She said, "It was a blessing to be busy."

Available resources

Helen found several organizations extremely beneficial in helping her make wise decisions. These included Lancaster County Farmers Association, PFA Farm Management and Business Analysis, Co-ops, the Farm and Home Association and the extension services.

She holds office in the Pennsylvania Farmer's Association women's committee and legislation committee and is a member of the Farm and Home Center, Farm Women Society 8, Business and Professional Woman legislative committee, Trinity Luthern choir, and is a Welcome Wagon representative for her community. She assisted in a Farm Safety film for Pennsylvania Farmers Association for which Penn State Extension gave her an award for her outstanding contribution to farm safety.

Her children include Ginny married to Don Ranck; Lilly Ann married to Galen Kopp; Joe; Tom, married to Cynthia; and Pamela married to Eugene Davis.

Helen warns widows, "Be on the alert. You need to assert yourself and not let others make decisions for you."

Helen warns others who may be in similar situations, "Be on the alert. You need to assert yourself and not let others make decisions for you."

Helen Wivell admires the farm that she and her husband purchased. She said that she and her husband often felt that they had the wealth of the land even if they did not have much money.

Butter Up The Holidays

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The holidays were "dairy" special this year as part of a promotion campaign conducted by the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program and the PA Department of Agriculture. The Campaign was designed to remind consumers to "Butter Up the Holidays with Real Dairy Products."

The award-winning campaign was conceived by the PDPP, PDA and the Neiman Advertising Group, of Harrisburg. The promotion was designed to increase sales of dairy products during the holiday season, a time when consumer purchases of food products are high. The radio advertising portion of the campaign received a citation of excellence from the 1990 Addy Awards presented by the Central Pennsylvania Advertising Federation.

Newspaper ads with a mail-in coupon along with 60-second radio commercials were the main features of the campaign. The radio advertisements, featuring Doug Jeffers the voice of Pennsylvania Agriculture, called for consumers to purchase real Pennsylvania dairy products for use in their holiday recipes. The newspaper advertisements, which included a picture of a holiday table with plenty of real dairy products, were placed in the food section of local newspapers in 11 markets statewide. Over 7,000 people returned the newspaper coupons to receive the manufacturers coupons and holiday dairy recipes that were offered.

The following Pennsylvania dairy manufacturers provided coupons for the promotion: Jack & Jill Ice Cream Company, Bensalem; Meadow Brook Dairy, Erie; Weis Markets, Sunbury; Turkey Hill Dairy, Conestoga; Taylor Milk Company Inc., Ambridge; Marburger Farm Dairy Inc., Evans City; Sani-dairy, Johnstown; Titusville Dairy, Titusville; Schneider's Dairy Inc., Pittsburgh; Turner Dairy Farms Inc., Pittsburgh; Green's Dairy Inc., York; Penn Dairies Inc., Lancaster; and Colteryahn Dairy Inc., Pittsburgh.

Build A Support System For Families

Many families need a support system to cope with the separations brought about by Operation Desert Storm.

In times of crisis, a natural support system for families generally falls into place. But sometimes it does not. Today's families may not have nearby relatives. Friends may want to help, but may not know what to do. Also, some people distance themselves from family and friends because they feel too uncomfortable with strong emotions such as anger, sadness or grief. Often families in crisis may feel abandoned and isolated.

Many families do not know how to reach out or ask for help. The first step is to acknowledge that you need help and support. When faced with a crisis, healthy families do not pretend that things will go on as normal.

The second step is to identify people who can help. This usually includes the people you live with and people you interact with on a regular basis (friends, teachers, neighbors, co-workers, extended family). Also think of people who influence your life such as your minister, a high level supervisor or employer, or a social service agency. You might also want to seek out people that you do not know, but who are going through the same or similar experiences.

The third step is to decide what support these people might give. Consider personalities. Some people in a support circle are better listeners while others would be better at taking the kids for an outing or working on the car. Spread requests around so everyone feels needed, but not overwhelmed.

It can be difficult to ask for help. You might want to ask a close friend, minister or teacher to open some doors when you need help from more distant individuals or support groups. Employers, TV stations, businesses, churches, and social service agencies are often willing to help a request to get started.

It is a very rare person who does not need help sometime. The day will probably come when you can return the favor. Helping others and receiving help can be an enriching experience that builds strong friendships and alliances.

Stress Can Affect Eating Habits

Routines can be unbearable burdens rather than stabilizing factors in times of stress - especially when the routine is family dinner and the stress is due to a family member's absence because of military assignment.

From a nutritional standpoint, researchers know that healthy eating promotes physical health, which in turn helps an individual deal with mental stress.

Eating a variety of foods in moderate amounts is always advisable, and especially so for persons under stress. Doing so may be harder, however, especially if you feel out of control.

Nutritionists suggest three ways you can practice controlling food, rather than letting yourself be controlled by food.

First, get a grip on yourself. Admit that you feel stressed, but do not dwell on your "right" to be stressed. The sooner you accept the fact that you cannot control the source of your stress, the sooner you will be ready to take control over how you react to that stress. One choice you make in reacting to stress is whether you will continue to eat normally, or whether you will overeat or avoid eating.

Second, keep eating in perspective. It is neither the most important, nor the least important thing you do each day.

Third, don't skip meals. That's always a temptation for individuals who feel overworked due to increased job or family responsibilities.

One of the best ways to meet those demands is to take care of your physical health and that means giving your body the nutrients and food energy it needs to function.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — If you're trying to cut back on cholesterol and sodium intake, take some tips from restaurant chefs.

In response to clients' demands, many restaurants are searching for lighter fare.

"But we don't want to lose flavor while working for lower salt intake," a chef said.

On Monday, the American Heart Association held a Food Fair of Lighter Fare at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster.

Cooking demonstrations of low sodium, low cholesterol, low fat products were touted.

Lloyd Esh of Bird-In-Hand Restaurant, which is famous for it's hearty Pennsylvania Dutch food, said that he was pleased to learn new ways to prepare vegetables and meat. "We need to change some of our recipes for less fat," he said. "But the three different kinds of fat gets confusing."

He was referring to saturated, monounsaturated, and polyunsaturated fats.

Saturated fats tend to raise blood cholesterol levels. They are found in the largest amounts in meat and dairy products. Coconut and palm kernel oils are also high in saturated fats.

Monounsaturated fats are found in plants. Olive oil, peanut oil, canola, and some margarines and shortening tend to be high in monounsaturated fats and current studies show that monounsaturated oils seems to lower bad cholesterol in the blood.

Polyunsaturated fats tend to lower blood cholesterol levels.

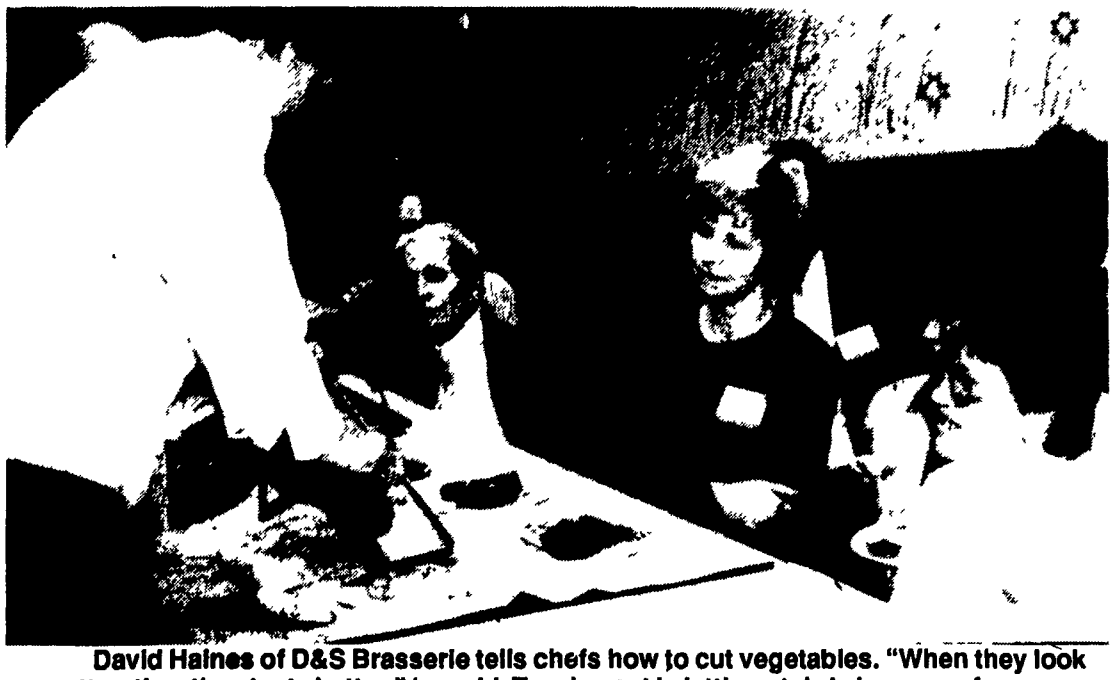
Michelle Futty, left, hands out sugar-free applesauce to E.F. Gills of the Fulton Steamboat Inn. The natural cinnamon apple sauce is sold under the Lucky Leaf brand name by Musselman's. It demonstrates that the proper proportion of spices can eliminate the need for sugar.



David Haines of D&S Brasserie tells chefs how to cut vegetables. "When they look attractive, they taste better," he said. Turnips cut in lattice-style bring raves from customers who otherwise would refuse to eat them.

The American Heart Association encourages the population to reduce fat intake to 30 percent of calories. One third of fat calories should come from each fat — monounsaturated, polyunsaturated, and saturated. About 50 percent of calories should come from carbohydrates.

Herbs are a good way to enhance the natural flavor of food and season food when decreasing salt.

Spices should be used to compliment the flavor of a dish rather than overcome it. If possible, ground spices should be added just prior to the end of cooking time; when in ground form, spices give up their flavor quickly.

Recipes for some of the food that chefs prepared have been approved by the American Heart Association as follows.

LASAGNA FLORENTINE

Cook:
1 finely diced onion
2 tablespoons chopped garlic

Add:
1 box frozen chopped spinach
½ cup sherry wine

Reduce until there is no liquid left. Mix spinach with two three-pound tubs of low fat Ricotta cheese, 2 cups Parmesan cheese, 4 whole low cholesterol eggs or egg beaters, 3 tablespoons basil
Salt or salt substitute
Pepper to taste

Spread mixture onto cooked and colled lasagne noodles and roll. Bake in oven with red sauce.

MOVE INTO THE FUTURE WITH WESTFALIA STIMOPULS

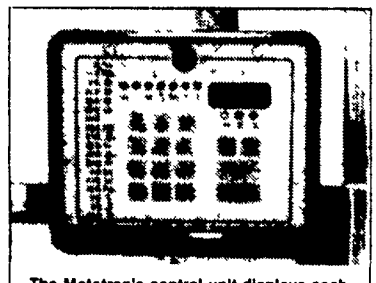
Today's top dairymen and tomorrow's leaders in the dairy industry demand the milking efficiencies available with Stimopuls stimulation pulsation. To achieve the leading edge, they need maximum parlor efficiencies from their milking equipment. They recognize the need to overcome deficiencies in labor performance. They want to keep udder health in top condition.

By stimulating each cow for the proper time before milking begins, the maximum value from the natural hormone Oxytocin is realized. Oxytocin release allows the quickest milk letdown and gentle action on the cow's udder. Westfalia Stimopuls automatically performs this action on every cow, every milking.

With Westfalia Stimopuls, stimulation pulsation occurs for the proper period of time at 300 beats per minute. During this time, vacuum in the pulsation chamber is reduced. This causes the liner to envelop the teat lightly and exert a vibrating stimulation on the teat. In this phase, the hormone Oxytocin enters the udder through the blood. This contracts the myoepithelium cells acting on the alveoli for a fast, complete milkout. This allows for the best possible mechanical milking of the cow

Will your equipment choice today allow you to be among tomorrow's leaders?



The Metatron's control unit displays each cow's production as it is being recorded by the milk meter

Best Of Lancaster County Agriculture Showcased

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — A smorgasboard of Lancaster County's bounty greeted guests at the annual Cooperative Extension meeting on February 21.

"This is grazing at its best," said a guest who had a plate heaped high with food provided by local commodity groups.

The Cooperative Extension combined the social event, attended by about 200, with business reports of the organization's activities and election of directors.

In response to a shaky economy, many question whether or not Lancaster County farmers will survive?

"Yes," Jay Irwin, county extension director, predicted. "The extension helps farmers make smarter and more accurate decisons to make a profit — the best way I know to preserve farms."

Irwin plans to retire May 1. While countians grieve Irwin's departure, Dr. Paul Wangsness, Capital region extension director, reminded the association that quality and quantity personnel remain at the Lancaster Extension.

Although state funding for the extension has been restricted, Dr. Wangsness praised county commissioners for allowing funding for a new extension position that will focus on environmental issues.

Guests at the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension meeting compared the many varieties of apples grown in Lancaster County.

From all the extension agents with less than 10 years service, Lancaster County Extension Livestock Agent Chet Hughes was chosen for the top Pennsylvania Extension Achievement Award. Hughes impressed the judges with his development of the Sheep and Wool Growers Association, now in its fifth year.

Livestock Extension Agent Chet Hughes received the Pennsylvania achievement award. The award is given to only one extension agent in the state. Hughes earned the award for establishing the Lancaster County Sheep and Wool Growers Association.

Hughes, who has been with the extension for about 10 years, said that he organized the Sheep and Wool Growers Association five years ago.

"It's primarily an educational association rather than promotional," he said.

Eighty members now participate in the educational meetings, which also holds sheep shearing schools.

For his efforts, Hughes was honored at the Extension's National Association meeting held at Seattle in October.

In other business, five directors for the extension association were elected: Dale R. Hershey, northwest section; John Groff, northeast section; Kenneth Rohrer, southwest section; Donald Herr, south-

Use Soy Oil

NEWARK, DE — Visitors at the 1991 Delmarva Corn and Soybean Technology Conference, held February 13 in Salisbury, Md., were greeted by the smell of fresh donuts cooked in soy oil. Although soy oil is the leading vegetable oil in the United States, it has never been touted as the gourmet's choice. But local soybean associations are out to change that with the help of a donut machine.

The machine, on loan from the Virginia Soybean Association, has been used at fairs and in malls to acquaint people with the great taste of foods cooked in soy oil. Perdue Farms Inc. Soybean Oil Refinery donated the cooking oil.

According to Jerry Kennedy, executive director of the Mid-Atlantic and Virginia Soybean Association, the best way to convince people that foods cooked in soybean oil taste great is to offer them a sample.

Kennedy began cooking the donuts the day before the conference to have enough for the early-morning rush. By the end of the conference he had cooked 310 dozen donuts.

Doug Corey (left), vice president of the Maryland Soybean Association; Mark Suitenfuss, board member of the Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association; and Jerry Kennedy, executive director of the Mid-Atlantic and Virginia Soybean Association, prepare donuts cooked in soy oil for visitors at the 1991 Delmarva Corn and Soybean Technology Conference in Salisbury, Md.

The attractive display of pork at the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension meeting proved that pork comes in many flavors and textures.

"People came back at the end of the day wanting to know if they could take some of the donuts home," he says.

Kennedy explains that soy oil is inexpensive and helps keep down the price of blended cooking oils. Soybean oil is high in polyunsaturated fatty acids. In spite of its dowdy image, soy oil is used in 83 percent of cooking oils and 90 percent of prepared salad dressings.

In 1989, the American Soybean Association introduced the SoyMark — a trademark and packaging symbol to identidy food products made with soy oil. The trademark pictures three leaves of the soybean plant printed in yellow against the backgrounid of a green square. "SoyOil" appears under the design.

"A soy oil trademark was first tested in a European market study," Kennedy says. "As a result of the advertising campaign, sales of products using the trademark increased 18 percent."

Kennedy notes that East Coast products have been slow to pick up the SoyMark. But it is appearing on products in the Midwest and in health-conscious California.

The Right Seed And Site Go Into A Successful Meadow Garden

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MORGANTOWN (Berks Co.) — A true meadow is comprised of 80 percent grass and 20 percent flowers. But many garden centers get requests from customers to install special meadow "gardens" with up to 80 percent flowers.

Growers should become aware of some of the proper seeding and maintenance in order to ensure proper meadow garden growth, according to Dr. David Sanford, assistant professor of horticulture at Penn State.

Sanford spoke to about 40 growers and greenhouse managers on Wednesday at the 1991 Garden Center Conference. The tips on how to establish and maintain a meadow garden emphasize the importance of choosing the correct seed and proper care and maintenance of the field.

Sanford spoke about several Penn State research trials conducted on meadow gardens. What researchers found was that a perennial mix of seeds, sowed on ground with very little turf or with some clump-forming type fescue, is the best.

Two types of mix

Sanford studied two types of mix — a mostly perennial mix (appearing every year) and a combination of the annuals (lasting only one year), binannuals (twice a year), and perennials. What the researchers found is that the perennial-only seed, in most cases, was the best, but customers have to wait a couple of years before there is a show of flowers.

And growers are faced with the questions of what to do with people who want to see the color right away.

Another problem, said Sanford, is that "you're eliminating the perennial show that you're going to have that second and third year by having annuals in the mix," he said. "We found that the mix consisting of just perennial will give you the better stand in the long run. How long they're going to last, I don't know."

The researchers concluded that if growers are going to use a mix that has a lot of annual seed in it, they're going to have to reseed every year.

Meadow site chosen

To set up a meadow garden test plot, in October, 1986, a fertile site on turfgrass was chosen. The sod was removed with a sod cutter, Roundup herbicide was applied, and the ground was roto-tilled to a 4-inch depth. The ground was then raked and the seed (mostly annual) was hand-sown.

flower seed mix, you may have 15-20 different seeds mixed together," said Sanford. "You're going to have large seeds. You're going to have small, hard seeds. You're going to have seeds that are fluffy and feathery. So you put one of those in a cyclone seeder and go out there and spread it, those fluffy seeds are going to drop right in front of you, and those little, hard seeds are going to shoot up 20 feet."

As a result, growers will not get a uniform spread. By spreading the seed by hand, and broadcasting half of it one direction and the other half in the other direction, the researchers got "a pretty uniform stand."

After sowing, the seed was raked in. But many of the seeds are so small that Sanford said by watering alone, many of the seeds will gain the "seed/soil" contact necessary for growth. The topsoil was then rolled.

Annuals showed up

The first flowers appearing were dandelions. But afterward, toward the beginning of summer, the annuals showed up. Toward August, the garden started to degrade. But the second year had the best showing, in early June up until the end of July. By the end of the third year, the plot was pretty much through.

"We had one or two early summers and that's it," he said. "This is typical of many of the mixes where the predominat seed mix is annual. You got to look at the percentage in there, too."

The mix used in the test plot was about 80 percent annual and 15 to 20 percent perennial seed. But a good combination depends on the site, which each grower must examine. A decision of what type of seed to use should follow.

"A lot of the plants you're finding in the meadow gardens tend to be from the prairie areas," sand Sanford. "Those are plants that are going to persist under the full sun."

Best mix

According to Sanford's chart, "Composition of Three Wildflower Mixes," the best mix consisted of the following: Achillea millefolium (White Yarrow, appearing June 1 to Sept. 1.); Coreopsis lanceolata (Coreopsis, appearing mid-June to mid-Sept.); Echinacea purpurea (Purple Coneflower, appearing Aug. 1 to mid-Oct.); Linum lewisii (Blue Flax, appearing mid-May to Aug. 1); Rudbeckia hirta (Black-eyed Susan, appearing Aug. 1 to mid-Oct.); and Solidago rigida (Goldenrod, appearing Sept. 1 to mid-Oct.).

"It's better to develop your own mix for your own specific site," said Sanford. "It will be less expensive in the long run."

Sanford said that the native grasses in this area were non-aggressive type grasses. "So it's very important, the site considerations," he said. "If you're trying to establish a meadow in a previous turf situation, where you have high fertilization, a good, fertile soil, and everything is promoting a turf grass, you're going to have a little more trouble — you're going to have to look at it more differently to establish a meadow."

Growers must be sure to mow the grass in late fall, about a week before Thanksgiving. That gives the Goldenrod time to seed correctly.

Growers should become aware of some of proper seeding and maintenance in order to ensure proper meadow garden growth, according to Dr. David Sanford, assistant professor of horticulture at Penn State. Sanford spoke to about 40 growers and greenhouse managers on Wednesday at the 1991 Garden Center Conference.

In the words of one expert, the old 80/20 rule still holds. That rule guides many of the marketing decisions faced on a daily basis by growers and garden center managers.

Dr. Dennis Wolnick, associate professor of floriculture at Penn State, spoke at the Garden Center Conference about the "green industry."

Growers should keep in mind that many of the buying decisions made, and thus what growers keep in stock and maintain, are based on the 20 percent of the customers who purchase 80 percent of the stock.

And from 20 percent of the wholesalers comes about 80 percent of what garden center managers buy.

Market products

The 1990s will prove to be a decade where growers must begin to "tighten up" on decision-making regarding how they will market their products and what to do with inventory.

Wolnick cautioned that growers should not keep an item in inventory "because it's nice," he said. Growers should be sensitive to customer demands and learn how to provide more position to a product.

Growers should also learn to take the 20 percent of the products that look better and make them stand out by giving more space to them and spotlighting them (as specialty items in jewelry stores). Then growers can demand a higher price.

Wolnick said that the poinsettia marketplace was recently caught up in a problem of overproduction and lack of demand. Growers can fight this during the next season by offering pink or yellow (lemon drop) type of poinsettia plants and keeping an eye out for specific customer demands.

Wolnick said he is "bullish on the green market" and projects that, in 1992, Pennsylvania retail sale and house demand for greenhouse products will be up 40.3 percent; total sales will be up 44.3 percent; retail sales will be about $419.7 million; and total projected nursery sales will be $626.4 million. The average household, in 1992 according to Wolnick, will spend $90 on garden center products.

Reading In '91 — Outlet For Holstein Fun

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

READING (Berks Co.) — Last week a new outlet was added to the Reading list — Holstein Fun. And according to participants in the Ladies Day Program held Friday at the Sheraton Berkshire, the outlet was udderly delightful.

Sponsored by the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, the program featured an Oley Valley Redware presentation, a fashion show, a luncheon, and shopping at the Vanity Fair outlets.

Reba Yoder, Vernette Meyers, and Nancy Semmel planned the day-long event.

"We know women always like to shop and what better place to shop than at Reading's outlets," Reba said.

To give women an idea of the styles and name brands available, Vanity Fair employees staged a fashion show especially for Holstein Convention members.

Vanity Fair modeled fashions for the busy woman.

Oley Valley Redware located in Berks County told the fascinating story of the traditional earthenware pottery that is the oldest type pottery known.

The earliest pieces were not glazed, potter Gerald Yoder told the audience. Eventually, glazing compounds were formulated and the pottery was glazed on top but not on the bottom. The serious collector of this redware still insists that contemporary redware not be glazed on the bottom so that it matches the older pieces.

The redware actually originated in ancient Egypt and what is now called Iraq before the pottery-making skill spread throughout Europe. When George Adam Weidner settled in the Oley Valley in the 1700s, his earthen roof tiles and redware pottery were used extensively by pioneers in Berks and surrounding counties. Part of that collection is now in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City.

In 1981 after a 200-year lapse of the craft, Gerald Yoder, the great-great grandson of Weidner, revived the redware art.

Originally, the clay used in the pottery was collected from a creek near Oley, but today commercial clay is used since it produces better greenware with less work in clay preparation. The bottom of a redware item is made from the same clay substance as early bricks.

A variety of techniques used in the pottery making includes slip painting, carving, piercing, and overglazing on the redware.

The slip painting technique uses white clay that is painted on top of the red clay. After it is glazed the white clay turns yellow.

The Swiss pierced the edges of the plates and wove a ribbon through the pierced pottery so that the plates could be hung on the walls.

Sponsored by the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, the program featured an Oley Valley Redware presentation, a fashion show, a luncheon, and shopping at the Vanity Fair outlets.

Paint and scratch designs expose the red clay beneath. Yoder paints with liquid clay like an artist does with oils. Some of the most popular designs such as the Tree of Life, distelfink, and love birds are still formed, but Yoder stresses that each piece is an original.

"Art critics do not allow copying. Only originals are considered art, others are copies. We must create new Pennsylvania German motifs to help the Pennsylvania German culture grow," he said.

Yoder explained the meaning behind the traditional motifs. In the tree of life motif, three tulips represent the trinity, five lilies stand for good luck, and seven lilies represent guardian angels — one for each day of the week.

The distelfink, the extremely popular design used extensively on Pennsylvania German Folk art, is a legendary bird of good luck. Those made in Lancaster County show the bird looking back over its shoulder for an extra measure of good luck.

The thistle edge placed on the edge or redware represents the crown of thorns that was placed on Jesus' head.

Yoder said that collectors look for certain hallmarks and principals of art design.

As an artist, Yoder said that he creates from the top of his head and then checks to make sure these hallmarks are included; otherwise, creativity would be limited.

"The right balance of spontaneous and deliberate designs gives an innovative approach," he said.

Red Valley Redware is collected internationally and appears in the Smithsonian Institute and other galleries. Yoder is probably best known for the tulipware commemorative plate that the Lutheran Church of America commissioned him to do for the 500th birthday celebration of Martin Luther.

For more information, call Oley Valley Redware at 215-944-0227.

Members of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association always look forward to the Ladies Day luncheon, where they can socialize and learn from each other.

"We hope people return home with a renewed enthusiasm for the Holstein cow and new friendships that will last a lifetime," said Phoebe Bitler, general chairperson of the convention.

The program for the Ladies Day at the Pennsylvania Holstein Association Convention was planned by Nancy Semmel, Vernette Meyers, and Reba Yoder, chairperson.

These women, members of the registration committee, greeted participants at the Ladies Day program. Mary Jane Stoltzfus, Alice Hostetter, Eileen Schuler, and Darene Hartman.

Pennsylvania Holstein member Mim Kauffman, left, admires the redware made by Jerry Yoder who explained the history and meaning of the Pennsylvania Dutch motifs that decorate the pottery.

FFA HAPPENINGS

Manheim FFA

In cooperation with the National FFA, the Manheim Chapter of the FFA did the following in celebration of National FFA Week.

Tuesday, Feb. 19: The FFA held a school wide Scavenger hunt. Agriculture related clues were hidden around the school and Twin Kiss gift certificates were given to those who found them. The object of the hunt was to make the student aware of agriculture in their lives. The evening activities included a Sports Night in the high school gym. More than 50 members turned out for a night of volleyball, basketball, and dodgeball.

Wednesday, Feb. 20: In an effort to promote pride and patriotism, the FFA asked the students to where red, white, and blue. They also made 1,200 yellow ribbons available to students and staff members to wear that day.

Thursday, Feb. 21: In appreciation of the teachers and staff, the FFA made homemade sundaes for the faculty and staff after school. The FFA members miss some school because of field trips, ask teachers for help with projects, and ask for other favors for students by the staff during the school year and this is a thank you to them for their patience and support.

Friday, Feb. 22: The last school day of FFA Week was designated as Agriculture Machinery Day. FFA members brought in tractors used on their farms to show the students at Manheim Central what is involved in production farming.

Attends Seminar

The Manheim FFA Chapter attended the National FFA Organization's Made for Excellence (MFE) seminar in Somerset, N.J.

The two-day MFE personal development program helped students learn techniques for maintaining healthy self-esteem and dealing with peer pressure. The conference also featured goal-setting and positive attitude workshops.

MFE conferences, which began in 1987, will be held in 30 states during the 1990-91 school year. Thirty-three conferences have been scheduled. More than 5,000 junior high and high school students are expected to attend. Many FFA advisors attend the MFE seminars, and five pilot MFE for Teachers seminars are scheduled for this school year.

"Made For Excellence is an exceptional opportunity for many FFA members to participate in a national conference without the expense of leaving their home state," said MFE Program Manager Kipling Godwin. "These conferences bring out the very best in the students and advisors who participate."

MFE program staff members are college students who are former state or national FFA officers. Many staff members have also worked as counselors for the Washington Conference Program, FFA's national leadership seminar held in Washington, D.C. each summer.

Senior 4-H and FFA Youth

Penn State University Cooperative Extension from Erie, Crawford, and Mercer counties announces upcoming programs for older 4-H and FFA and interested youth who are interested in learning more about agricultural careers and farm management.

Bio-technology highlights the next program set for Monday, March 4, at the Meadville Days Inn at 7:30 p.m. Kathy Klepfer, a representative from Monsanto, is our featured speaker here. She will focus on Biotechnology's impact on the agricultural community, what's ahead, and what may exist for a career in Biotechnology.

The financial management seminar has been rescheduled for March 25, 1991, at the Meadville Days Inn. Ron Kerr and Jim Hogue, farm loan officers from Pennbank and Farm Credit, respectively, will be offering their expertise in the farm financial field.

Items to be discussed include financial management on the farm, records, what it takes to start and what a bank looks for in making financial decision. If you want practical insight into what good financial management is, please plan to attend.

The last program will be about animal nutrition, some basics, the making of a good nutrition program, and some hands-on work. This is set for the Meadville Days Inn for April 8 at 7:30 p.m.

Controlled release Knox Out. Once they touch it, they're stuck with it.

And that means they're dead A one-second spray of Knox Out* delivers up to 27 million microcapsules of pest-stopping insecticide Capsules that stick to the microscopic hairs of the insect's body, travelling with it wherever it goes And even a few capsules can kill an insect

Knox Out provides effective control of fungus gnat larvae, mealybugs, scale, caterpillars, leafrollers, armyworms and other pests—it even kills ants and cockroaches

Mealybugs suck the juices from plants and spread diseases

Knox Out packs its power inside microcapsules, to dramatically increase effectiveness.

Microencapsulation is the key to Knox Out's long-lasting protection

The semi-permeable membrane walls of these microscopic capsules release 87% pure technical Diazinon, controlling insects for up to four weeks.

The same capsule walls protect Knox Out from moisture, air and other environmental factors. So regular plant waterings don't dilute its strength.

Knox Out delivers a one-two punch to insect pests.

Microencapsulated Knox Out kills insects two ways. As a mobile contact insecticide that adheres to them, and as a lethal internal toxicant for chewing insects.

Apply Knox Out as a soil surface spray for fungus gnat larvae. Spray plants to eliminate mealybugs and scale Use it as a broad spectrum foliage spray and a perimeter treatment to control a variety of insects.

Microencapsulated Knox Out is less toxic to mammals and less phytotoxic to plants—even poinsettias.

Microencapsulated insecticides are water based, so they contain fewer solvents that could be harmful to plants. And most of the insecticide is kept within the capsule, away from sensitive plant surfaces. That means you can use Knox Out on most greenhouse plants, including tender seedlings and poinsettias.

Fungus Gnat Larvae cause severe damage to delicate root systems

Microencapsulation greatly reduces dermal toxicity, too. So handling treated plants isn't a problem.

Knox Out works harder, longer, better.

YOUR INSPECTION INVITED
Yes, we invite you to carefully inspect Ripple, our "Chief Mark" daughter. She is selling at the Maryland Convention Sale on Saturday, March 9th at the Howard County Fairgrounds. She has the strength, size, and exceptionally good leg and foot of her dam.
Her dam is a VG daughter of Pabst with 19,300 milk and 706 fat, in a short 5 year old record. Ripple's second dam was a real milky Gay Ideal with records up to 23,720 milk and 930 fat. Her third dam was an Excellent daughter of Triune Complete, with records up to 21,250 milk and 921 fat.
Tie this "super good" pedigreed family to Walkway Chief Mark and all the things he does so well, and we have quite an exceptional heifer. As an added bonus she is due to Leadman shortly after the sale.
Come see her at the farm until March 6th, when she will be moved to the Fairground.

EAR CORN FOR SALE DELIVERED TO THE FARM
CUSTOM DRYING & STORAGE

With milk prices reaching an all time low, milking cows isn't your biggest expense. It's Feeding. In the months ahead, the right ration could make the difference between profit and loss.

Between last year's drought and this year's dairy compromise bill, your biggest chore isn't milking. It's feeding. In the months ahead, the right ration could make the difference between profit and loss.

At Pillsbury, we've got the feed ingredients and feeding know-how to keep your dairy business strong. Our complete line of dairy feeds— wet brewers grain, mineral mixes, milk replacers, and many more--can help you reduce feed costs, and still feed a nutritionally balanced ration to your herd.

Our feed consultants are experts in dairy feeds and nutrition. They can provide you with computerized ration formulation, forage sampling and nutrient testing. And, of course, all our products. For your dairy farm, these are good business ingredients. From Pillsbury.

Bedford Cattlemen Award Youth

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Prizes were awarded to outstanding Bedford County youth who are involved with beef cattle at the annual banquet held at Ed's Steak House in Bedford.

Nathan Claycomb winner of the grand champion trophy at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show and Michael Shankle, Bedford County outstanding 4-H boy received the honors from Sandy Claycomb who chaired this part of the Cattlemen's program.

Nathan is the son of Jeff Claycomb of Alum Bank and has been winning a steady stream of trophies with his bulls, Boss and Chief for the past year.

Michael, the son of Fred and Susan Shankle, Schellsburg RD 1, has three cows, two steers, and a bull. A senior at Chestnut Ridge High School, he plans to attend the Pennsylvania State University to major in pre-med.

Speaker for the evening was Glenn Eberly, director of the Meat Animal Evaluation Center at Penn State.

Eberly is a director on the Pennsylvania Beef Council, co-chairman of the first and second annual Pennsylvania Beef Expo, director of the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, and served as president of the PCA for two years.

Eberly has a herd of 80 purebred angus cows and 800 acres of farmland in Tioga County.

To demonstrate his speech, Eberly showed a slide presentation dealing with "checkoff dollars," which are raised when beef producers contribute $1 for each head of cattle sold.

The rules of the Cattlemen's Association indicate that these dollars can be used only to strengthen the beef product markets.

Eberly foresees the general economy having an impact on the market. He said, "Beef producers cannot become complacent because there are still a low of difficult problems which need to be addressed."

"We still have threats from the animal rights people," Eberly continued. "We are being blamed in some way for rain forest defoliation and the most ridiculous accusation of all is the methane being released in the atmosphere due to the over expulsion from cattle."

The speaker was pleased to note that one of the latest medical findings suggests that cholesterol which is too low is being linked to cerebral hemorrhages.

Eberly was also upbeat on the opening of export markets in Korea, Canada, and Mexico.

"We are the most efficient beef producers in the world," Eberly concluded.

New directors elected at the annual meeting included: Paul Slayton and Allen Hammond, one year; Jim Claycomb and Sam Anderson, two years; Sandy Claycomb, Jim Fisher, Sandy Snyder, and Sam Wyles, three years.

Dorlin Hay is president and Ralph Keibler, vice president of the organization.

Door prizes were awarded by area farm related businesses.

DPI Begins Fund Drive

GEORGETOWN, Del. — The 1991 Fund Drive has begun for the Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI), the 4,000-member nonprofit trade association working for the continued progress of Delmarva's poultry industry.

At the fund drive kick-off dinner on February 12 in Seaford, Delaware, DPI Second Vice President Larry K. Winslow, on behalf of Fund Drive Chairman Dr. Tom Holder, announced that $223,754 in cash and pledges had been reported.

"We're off to a good start toward reaching our goal of $450,000," Winslow told the nearly 200 volunteer solicitors.

The men and women working on behalf of DPI represent all phases of the industry from across Delmarva. In the next two months, they will be contacting past DPI investors and seeking new memberships from businesses and individuals on and off Delmarva.

DPI membership includes poultry growers, allied industry suppliers of products and services, Delmarva's eight poultry companies, poultry company employees, and non-poultry businesses on Delmarva which recognize the importance of the chicken industry to the area's economy.

As the kickoff speaker, Dr. Reed Stewart, president of Wesley College in Dover, Delaware, was charged with motivating the volunteer solicitors. "Perseverance is an essential quality you will need," he said, "I believe you can handle any challenge that comes along."

TORQUE AMPLIFIERS & CLUTCHES

★ New Wider Heavy Duty Super Sprag 1-1/32" Wide

★ 5 Yr. Warranty Against Sprag Failure

★ Introductory Price $695.00

We are pleased to announce a major improvement in TA strength & performance backed up by a warranty that is unmatched in the industry The 5/8" width Dana sprag which we have used over the past 10 years has proven its ability to perform under the most adverse of conditions and has achieved results that have sent our competitors scrambling to keep up. By increasing the width of the sprag to 1-1/32" and caging it in a heavier frame, we now have an unmatched shock load capacity and dramatically raised our load carrying ability Our studies have shown that 90% of TA problems are directly related to sprag failure We feel that we now have the strongest sprag & best rebuilt TA available and it will be warranted as follows:

*5 yr. - 100% parts & labor against sprag
*2 ry. - 100% parts & labor on remainder of unit

Our standard heavy duty TA is still available at $645.00 and carles a *2 yr. - 100% parts & labor warranty.

* Certain restrictions apply and there will be a maximum labor pay-out of $450.00

COMPARE THESE FEATURES AND OPTIONS

Simple hydraulics allows one valve to operate the lift and stabilizer cylinders. Center plumbing means less hose length and easier coupling.

The basic box is heavy-duty steel welded seams, and reinforced for even more strength.

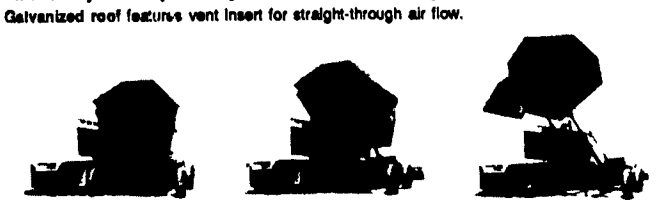
Stabilizer cylinders hydraulically lock on to axle to hold wagon rigid during dump cycle

Galvanized roof features vent insert for straight-through air flow.



The model 700 dump wagon is designed for years of trouble free service. The hydraulic system with a cable assist is designed to unload large loads of up to 20,000 lbs. quickly and efficiently even if the load is not distributed evenly.

Make your operation safer • Use year round • Variety of crops • All field conditions • Operate in wet and muddy

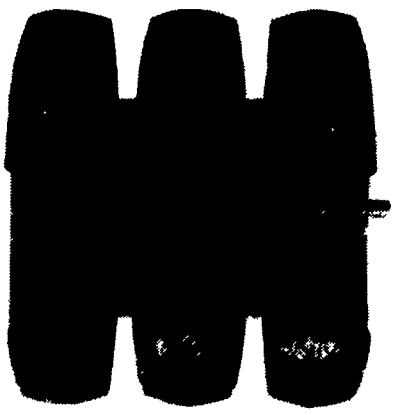
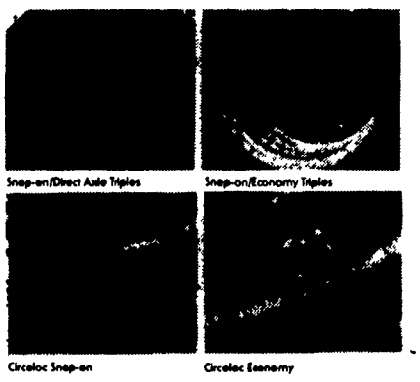
UNVERFERTH Snap-Ons: More Of What You're Looking For



Cutaway view of deluxe Circoloc Snap-on Triples Installation

Traditional Unverferth features, like the permanent, welded Wedg-Lok spacer band which seats and supports the inner part of the Circoloc rim have been retained The well known Snap-on and Economy clamp styles are offered, also And, strong double bevel rims are furnished in the larger wheel sizes

Circoloc Snap-on Wheel System. The fastest installing Unverferth open center wheel systems feature the Snap-on clamps This same proven clamp mechanism is used in the new Circoloc Snap-on system Once slid into position on the tubular clamping ring and threaded onto the attaching hooks the clamp snaps into position using the handle supplied with the rim attachments The positive over-center clamping action of the Circoloc Snap-on clamps locks the rim spacer band firmly in place.



Circoloc Economy Wheel System. The Circoloc Economy System is identical to the Snap-on System except the cast Economy clamp lacks the deluxe mechanism of the Snap-on clamp It takes a little longer to install and remove The Economy clamp is attached by tightening a special spherical washer and nut on each clamp with a wrench Unverferth offers a special wrench just for this task as an option The spherical washer allows the nut to be started at any angle making mounting alignment faster and providing a uniform grip over the contact area of the clamp

The money saving Circoloc Economy System is ideal for the inner pair of wheels on a triples installation which frequently gets switched back to duals but not often back to singles The outer wheels would be the time-saving Circoloc Snap-on units

Wasting chemical and yield on hills and headlands is a thing of the past with Vicon's new flow proportioning and boom compensation system. Application rate remains constant even when ground speed varies or individual boom sections are shut off. That means better coverage with lower input costs.

It is available on all Vicon trailer sprayers with tank capacities up to 785 U.S. gal. (3000 litres) and automatic stabilizing booms from 28' to 62'. There's also a choice of hydraulic or manual folding booms and a range of accessories that make crop spraying less of a chore.

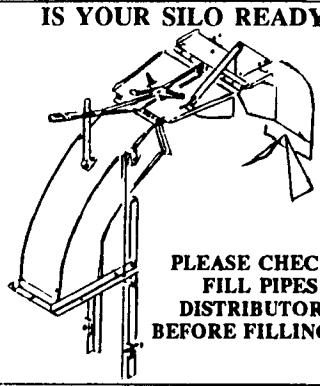
S & S SILO SERVICE

ATTENTION FARMERS
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete

STRONGER AND WILL OUT LAST PLASTER

S & S Silo Service Has 10 Years Experience With Shotcrete Relining

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

When planning your forage programs this year, remember that your main objective is to "store the plant and remove it from storage in as good condition as possible." THE UPRIGHT SILO HAS NEVER BEEN EQUALLED IN ITS ABILITY TO DO THIS!!

As herds become larger and labor is becoming more costly and scarce, there is more need to cut time requirements for all parts of the operation. The silo, or a combination of silos can be a key in reducing time spent harvesting, storing, and feeding your herd. "A properly managed upright silo is one of the best investments that a dairy farmer can make." Your best choice is a POURED CONCRETE SOLLENBERGER SILO...

GAME BIRD CONFERENCE SCHEDULED

Herbert C. Jordan
Associate Professor of Poultry Science

The infant game bird industry of 1967 has had modest expansion in Pennsylvania.

Managers of hunting clubs and growers of pheasants, Chukar partridge, Bobwhite quail, wild turkey, guinea fowl, Mallard ducks, and exotic species will attend a two-day conference at the Days Inn in State College, Pa. on March 11 and 12. Anyone may receive a program by calling (814) 865-8301.

Many 4-H, FFA, and non-member youngsters enjoy hatching eggs from the species named above in a classroom incubator, then growing and releasing the game birds. Census figures do not count game birds in captivity; however, we believe more than one million individuals are grown each year.

The conference program will cover techniques, methods, care, and husbandry of brooding young stock as well as managing hunting preserves.

The Chukar partridge has increased in numbers recently in Pa. Bobwhite quail are grown and released by many people but the number of breeder flocks are few. The ringneck pheasant is still the most popular game bird grown in Pennsylvania.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission has been working in recent years to introduce a hybrid of the Sichuan pheasant (from China) into reverting farmland or forest edge.

Sheep Quality, Yield Grading Important

DENVER, Colo. — The major players in the sheep industry say a mandatory quality and yield grading system could help the industry alleviate its marketing woes, and will ask USDA to take a look at their plan.

Representatives of the packing, feeding, and production segments of the industry met in Denver February 8 to hash out possible solutions to the marketing crunch that has sheep producers coast-to-coast reeling. Major lamb feeders and packers were on hand for the meeting.

"We had complete consensus that we should implement a yield grade system and that it would be beneficial to the industry," said the president of the American Sheep Industry Association, Jim Magagna. The Rock Springs, Wyo., producer said ASI initiated the industry meeting in an effort to put the yield-grade plan into action. "This is an effort to put the lamb industry into a value-based marketing system," he said. "By coupling quality and yield grade, we are addressing palatability of the meat and cutability of the carcass in one program. It has worked for the beef industry. It can work for us."

With total agreement from the industry, USDA representatives have indicated a plan could be implemented in as little as six to eight months.

The draft plan calls for coupling yield and quality grades and making the grading mandatory. It also mandates removal of kidney and pelvic fat on the kill floor, changing the current grading standards for lamb. The yield grade system would rely almost exclusively on backfat measurements, utilizing a metal probe at the 12th to 13th ribs to measure backfat thickness.

"The Certified Lamb program initiated by ASI last year fits well into this plan," Magagna said. "The Certified carcasses will fall into the yield grade 1-2 levels, and should make up about 45 percent of slaughter levels. Our estimates show yield grade 3s will be about 28 percent and 4s and 5s will be about 24 percent."

Industry experts predict the plan will severely penalize the yield grades 4 and 5, providing the financial incentive to feeders and producers to concentrate on producing a carcass that will yield grade 1 and 2.

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The Maryland Department of Agriculture (MDA) has announced the addition of a new eligible practice to the Maryland Agricultural Water Quality Cost-Share Program (MACS).

Referred to as roof runoff management, the new practice is intended to elminiate water pollution which is caused directly by roof runoff from farm buildings.

Cost-sharing of up to 87.5 percent will be allowed for guttering, downspouts, gravel trenches, drain tile, rip-rap, and other components which are needed in each case to intercept roof runoff and transport it safely to a permanent, stable outlet. Residences are not eligible for cost-sharing, but other farm buildings are.

Under criteria adopted by the department, a proposed roof runoff project is eligible for MACS assistance only for those locations on a farm where existing roof runoff is causing severe soil erosion or transporting significant pollutants from animal waste, and where the roof runoff is contributing directly to the pollution of local streams or other surface waters.

Eligibility criteria and design requirements were developed by the department with the assistance of an interagency committee, which included representatives of the USDA Soil Conservation Service and the local soil conservation districts in Maryland, among others.

"The soil conservation districts have told us that improper handling of roof runoff often contributes significantly to the pollution of local streams, especially in certain cases involving livestock operations. I am pleased to be able to add this practice to the 'toolbox' available to the districts as they work to help farmers solve pollution problems on their farms," said Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Wayne A. Cawley, Jr.

The MACS program, in operation since mid-1983, is a major component of Maryland's ongoing efforts to reduce sediment and nutrient pollution of the Chesapeake Bay. MDA implements the program through the 24 local soil conservation districts in Maryland. Since 1983, the program has made a total of $24.9 million in state and federal funds available to farmers to install pollution controlling "best management practices" on their farms. By the end of 1990, a total of 5,700 individual projects had been approved for funding, of which 4,935 had been completed by farmers and for which $20.7 million had been paid out by MDA.

Farmers interested in receiving MACS assistance on the roof runoff practice, or any one of the 21 other practices recognized by the program, should contact their local soil conservation district or the Maryland Department of Agriculture, Office of Resource Conservation, in Annapolis at (301) 841-5865.

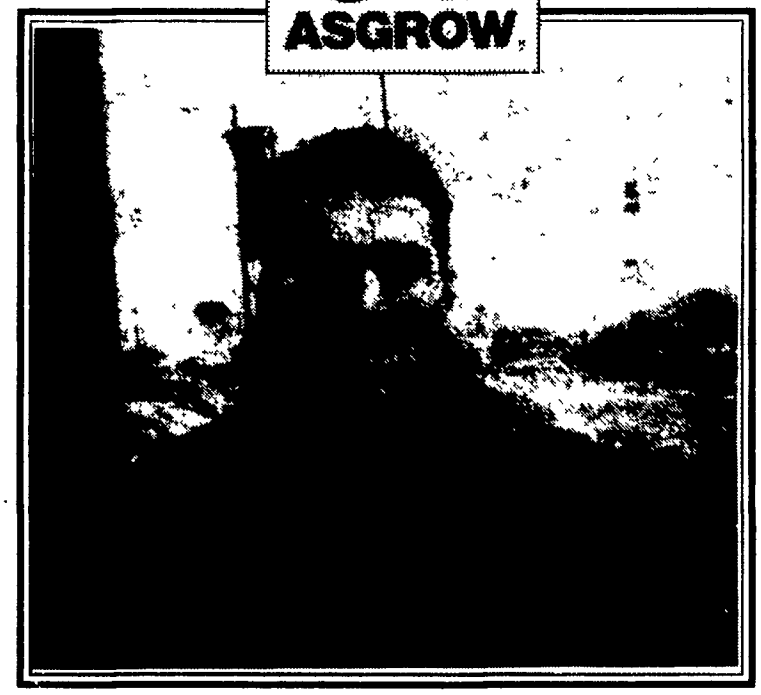
ASGROW



Richard Schlosburg - Newtown Square, PA

When you are deciding what brand of soybean seed to plant, just take a minute to hear one of your fellow soybean growers.

"The issue of planting Asgrow soybeans is very simple. Just look at the Landisville test. (Topped Penn State trial three year averages with A3935 at 67.5 BU/AC) In past years I planted up to 400 acres of Asgrow beans.... and averaged 47 bushels per acre. As far as performance goes, last year I put A4393 out the 20th of April; they stayed in the ground for 18 days and still yielded 58 bushel."

Get To Top Of Fountain With Pork King

CONRAD, Iowa — Ritchie Industries announced the introduction of a new hog fountain that gives pork producers complete access to all functions from the top of the fountain, according to Cliff Wilson, Ritchie president.

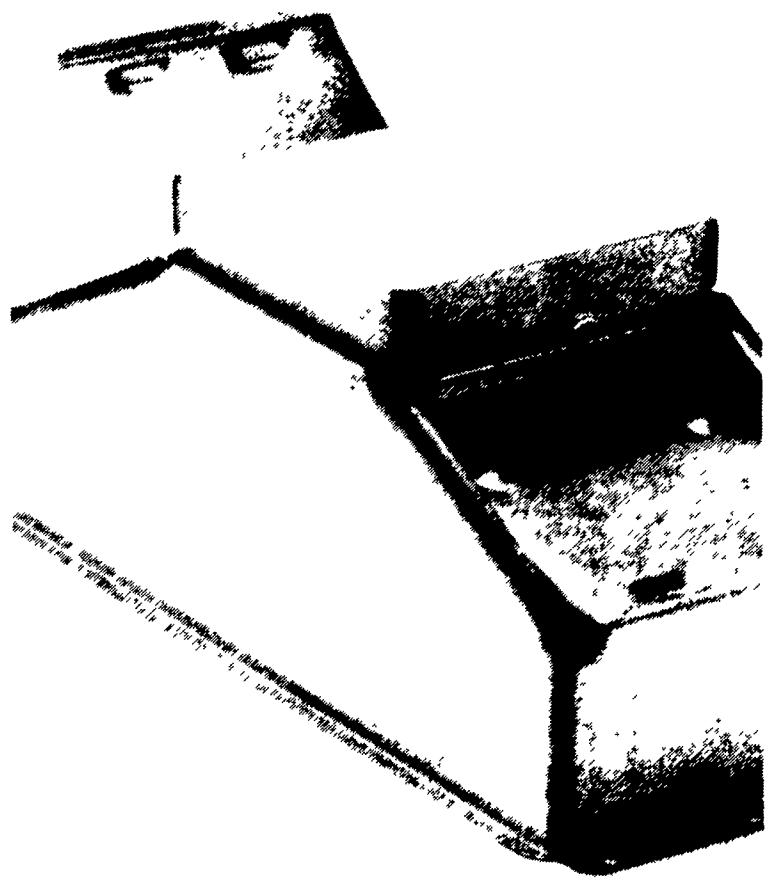
"The Pork King™ has an easy access, lift-off cover," Wilson said, "That means no more digging in the muck to clean and service the unit. Livestock producers simply lift off the cover."

According to Wilson, the innovative "slip-over" top cover uses no screws or latches, so hogs can't get it open. When in place, it prevents feed and outside elements from getting inside, and heat from escaping. And it won't freeze shut.

Like all Ritchie products, the Pork King is made to last, Wilson said. The all-welded, 14-gauge 304 stainless steel construction will take a beating from hogs and Mother Nature. And the stationary ¼" hinge rods and heavy duty drinking lids resist damage when hogs drink.

The Pork King also is energy efficient, according to Wilson. Extruded polystyrene insulation has a higher R-value than standard foam insulation to lock in heat during winter, and keep water cooler during summer.

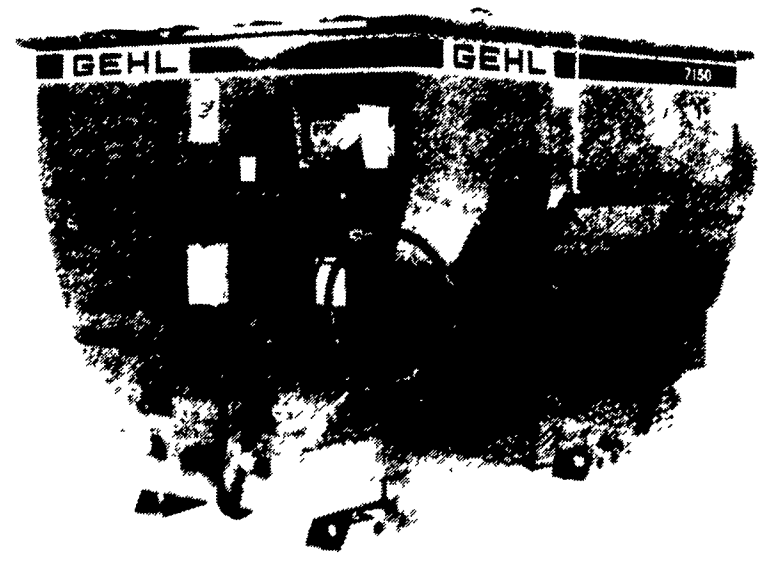
The new heater bracket design holds 125-watt heaters securely against the trough and an adjustable pre-set thermostat provides maximum energy efficiency.



Pork King™ hog fountain gives pork producers complete access to all functions from the top of the fountain.

The Pork King comes in two and four-drink designs, which are similar in size to existing hog fountains, and are available exclusively through Ritchie dealers.

For more information, contact Ritchie Industries, Inc., Customer Service, 120 South Main, P.O. Box 730, Conrad, IA 50621, (800) 747-0222.



Model ST7150 stationary mixer feeder has a mixing capacity of 150 cubic feet and is ideal for smaller-scale dairy producers who want to take advantage of a TMR feeding system to increase production.

TMR Mixer Made For Smaller Herds

WEST BEND, Wis.— The Gehl Company has introduced a new stationary mixer feeder for total mixed rations (TMR).

The model ST7150, with a mixing capacity of 150 cubic feet, is ideal for smaller-scale dairy producers who want to take advantage of a TMR feeding system to increase production.

The new ST7150 offers many of the same advanced features as other Gehl mixer feeders. These include:

- A unique four-auger system that blends feed ingredients in a double figure-eight pattern for fast, complete mixing.
- Patented star couplers that absorb shock loads on the bottom augers for increased durability.
- Energy-efficient planetary gears to reduce horsepower needs.
- A choice of electronic scales.
- Heavy duty ¼-inch thick steel auger trough bottoms.

Gehl offers six models of mixer feeders in trailer-type, truck-mounted, and stationary versions. Gehl mixer feeders, with mixing capacities ranging from 150 to 500 cubic feet, are designed to handle a wide variety of feed ingredients.

"The smaller capacity of the ST7150 mixer feeder is ideal for many producers who could not previously justify a TMR feeding system due to herd size or other constraints," said Terry LeFever, Gehl product manager for mixer feeders. "This machine does an excellent job making total mixed rations that include a small amount of long-stemmed hay."

Studies of total mixed ration systems indicate that dairy farmers could expect an average five percent increase in milk production, depending on the present level of production. Gains of up to 20 percent have been reported. Research also shows that cows will begin to respond to a TMR program within 24 hours in many cases.

Implementing a TMR program often requires a mixer feeder which thoroughly mixes all feed ingredients to make a complete ration. The return on investment for a mixer feeder is often less than one year, And some farmers have reported a 6-month payback.

For more information, contact your local Gehl dealer or write Gehl Company, Marketing Services Department, 143 Water St., West Bend, WI 53095.

Pork Demand Climbs

DES MOINES, Iowa — Average cash hogs prices jumped 23% to $54.48 per cwt. in 1990 compared with 1989, fueled in part by last year's overall increased consumer demand of 4.2%, according to University of Missouri agriculture economist Glenn Grimes.

Based on checkoff receipts, 1990 gross producer income totaled $11.8 billion, up $1.8 billion from 1989, Grimes said. "Roughly one-third of that increase can be attributed to the stronger consumer demand, with the other two-thirds resulting from inflation and a smaller pork supply," he said.

Except for a setback in 1989, consumer pork demand has been on the upswing since 1986. The change in direction coincides with implementation of the national legislative pork checkoff and introduction on the industry's checkoff funded "Pork--The Other White Meat"® promotion campaign.

"Either the pork industry has been extremely lucky, or the increased promotional efforts made possible by the checkoff and the improved quality of pork are influencing demand," Grimes said.

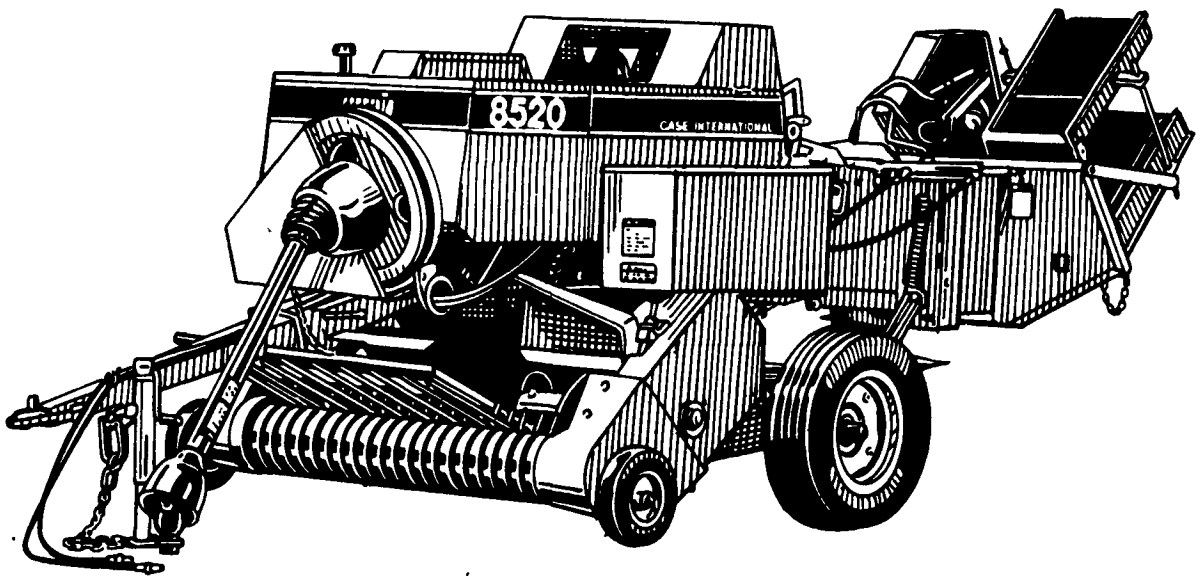
"Consumer attitudes about pork are changing," Grimes said. He noted that the latest results of a pork attitude and perception study, conducted biannually, showed that consumer pork perceptions in the areas of cholesterol, calories, and fat have improved dramatically since the White Meat campaign was launched.

"It's positive to note that out of the last five years, three years showed growth in pork demand, including three years in succession," Grimes said. "The downturn in 1989 is not at all unexpected in the overall upward trend that the pork industry is experiencing. In fact, in any upward trend, it's the exception rather than the rule to have five years in a row on the positive side."

For instance, out of the last eight years, the poultry industry has two years of negative demand growth (1985, 1990), one year of neutral growth (1987) and five years of positive growth (1983, 1984, 1986, 1988, 1989).

"Hopefully, 1991 will be another positive year for the pork industry," Grimes said. "But with the uncertainty in the economy, pork producers will have their work cut out for them."

OUTSTANDING BALER PERFORMANCE MEANS GREATER NUTRITION AT AN ECONOMICAL PRICE



Case International 8520/8530 Rectangular Balers

These two balers both feature the Case IH center line design. Eliminates turning corners with the crop to get it into the bale chamber, as is common with conventional designs. This saves valuable protein-rich leaves. Also saves time because you don't have to change from field to road position for transport.

Other outstanding features are:

- Low-profile baler design provides excellent visibility to the rear of the baler
- Low-profile pickup . . . reduces crop lifting height, saving nutritious leaves
- Hay goes straight into the unique prepacker chamber . . . regardless of windrow size . . . for uniform flake and bale density

Protect Your Lungs From Dust

EDWARD J. WOODS
Washington Co. Ag Agent

Whether in a coal mine or on the farm, dust can destroy lungs. Farmers who are exposed to dust over long periods of time risk the disabling disease called "farmer's lung."

As the dust accumulates in the lungs, the tissue hardens. This can lead to a variety of respiratory ailments including bronchitis and asthma. If the condition is not diagnosed soon enough, irreversible lung damage may occur.

Preventing farmer's lung doesn't necessarily require any elaborate or expensive equipment. A simple mask when dust can't be avoided will do. For example, when handling dry bedding, sweeping dusty walls or walks, or grinding and mixing feed.

Keeping the overall level of dust down is also helpful. Therefore, as soon as feed sacks or chemical containers are emptied, they should be discarded in the proper manner. Regular housecleaning of work areas is another good idea. Contact your local lung association for more information on how to protect your lungs.

Cattle Lice Reduce Profits

Cattle lice are most numerous during winter months. When they infest cattle herds, they can reduce a beef or dairy farmer's profit.

Unchecked lice in a cattle herd will greatly reduce beef gains and cut milk production. This is especially true in cold weather when they add to stress conditions faced by the cattle.

Lice live on cattle during summer. But they don't increase rapidly until fall or early winter. When uncontrolled, lice multiply quickly and become a serious problem in late winter. They lower the vitality of the infested cattle during cold weather when animal health is crucial.

For dairy cattle, Ciovap, Ciodvin, or CoRal are recommended for louse control. Both, when properly applied, are approved for cows in milk and for calves over four months of age.

For beef cattle, the above three plus Prolate, Lovlan, Rabon are recommended. Whichever material is selected must be used properly.

For complete lice control with sprays, it is desirable to use 1 to 2 gallons per animal with complete head-to-tail coverage.

Dirty Air Cleaners Help Choke Engine Performance

That little time spent servicing a tractor or other engine during dusty field work days helps prolong its life and improves the efficiency of its engine.

A tractor or combine engine takes in about 9,000 gallons of air every gallon of fuel it burns.

A 100-horsepower tractor in normal operation will burn about six gallons of fuel every hour. This means that for every 10 hours of operation, the tractor engine takes in over ½ million gallons of air.

"That's a lot of air, and it may include a lot of dirt, especially under dusty conditions," the engineer said. "In extreme conditions, dirt can ruin an engine in less than a day's work if the air is not filtered."

Proper care of the air cleaner results in better economy and insures longer engine life. An efficient air cleaner removes any dust particles that would grind away engine parts such as cylinders, rings, and bearings. A clogged air cleaner will choke the engine, causing loss of power and excessive gas use.

Dry paper filters function much like air filters on automobiles. These filters can be blown out a coupel of times with an air hose, but be careful not to puncture them. Clean, inspect for leaks, and replace often when working in dirty conditions.

Generally, about every 10 hours of engine operation, the oil-bath air cleaner cup, if used, should be removed and old oil replaced by new oil. Scrape the dirt from the bottom of the cup and wash in kerosene or solvent before refilling.

Always follow the instructions in the operator's manual for detailed procedures for your particular tractors.

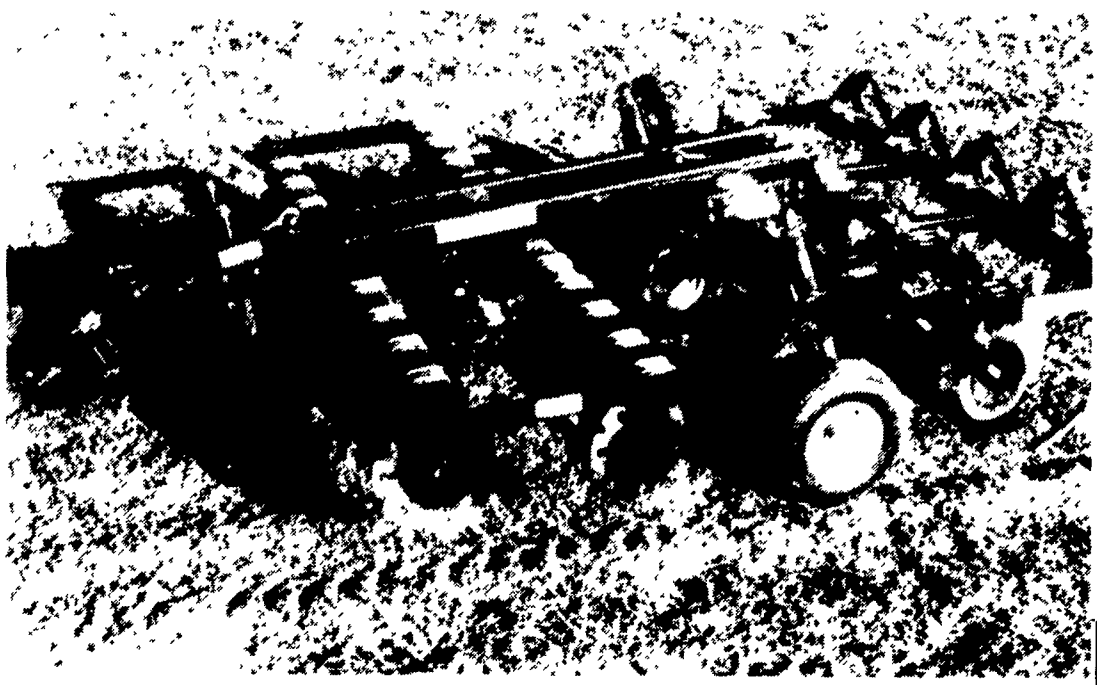
LandTracker Combines Tank-Carrying Capability, 3-Point

THURSTON, Neb.— Thurston's second-generation implement caddy, the BLU-JET™ LandTracker™, combines tank-carrying capability with 3-point implement hitches at both front and rear, making it a versatile one-pass machine for use throughout the year.

Both 3-point hitches can be either set for rough terrain flexibility or locked rigid, as required. The forward 3-point hitch is mounted beneath the high arched tongue of the LandTracker, and is capable of accepting a wide variety of tillage tools and implements. Now, the new LandTracker/Disc unit can be added, with 22-inch conservation discs to cut, churn and mix residue to help aerate for improved yields.



Thurston's BLU-JET™ LandTracker™ combines tank-carrying capability with 3-point implement hitches at both front and rear.

Add the Sub-Tiller II®, and this 3-point disc unit lets you disc deep or fully raise the disc hydraulically on the same pass while sub-tilling, leaving the surface level and residue intact.

The heavy 3-point hitch at the rear of LandTracker can pull deep tillage machines, tool bars, grain drills, planters, cultivators, chisels, or sprayers. Many other implements can be hitched to LandTracker in minutes. Hitch height and caddy wheels are hydraulically adjustable. Tread width is also adjustable.

With Thurston's Super 900 Flex Coulters on the front of the LandTracker and a drill on the rear, a field with heavy crop residue can be planted in a single pass with very little disturbance to the field.

Among the advantages seen for the new caddy design is an expected lower cost per bushel for crop production. Fewer trips through the field will be required, resulting in less soil compaction, lower fuel consumption, and greater versatility for best management practices.

For information, contact Thurston Manufacturing Co., P.O. Box 218, Thurston, NE 68062, (402) 385-3041 or (800) 658-3127.

Students Receive Corn Scholarships

NEWARK, Del. — Lee Richardson, University of Delaware junior, and John David Saathoff, University of Maryland Eastern Shore senior, received $500 scholarships from the 1991 Delmarva Corn and Soybean Technology Conference.

Frank Webb, University of Delaware Extension weed specialist, presented the scholarships at the conference on Feb. 13 in Salisbury, Md.

Students from the Delmarva peninsula who are U.S. citizens and are enrolled in a college of agricultural sciences or studying a related field are eligible.

Richardson, a native of Willards, Md., is studying general agriculture. A member of FFA, the National Agricultural Marketing Association, and agricultural honor fraternity Alpha Zeta, he carries a 3.46 grade point average in his major. Richardson plans to return to the family farm after graduating.

"I believe that planning for the future is important, as I am doing now by going to college," Richardson said. "However, I feel we should always remain flexible and open to new ideas in agriculture to keep competitive and in touch with markets."

Saathoff, a native of Denton, Md., is majoring in plant and soil, science. He maintains a straight-A average in his major field of study. Saathoff has worked as a market development assistant for ICI Americas. He has been president of the UMES Agriculture Science Club for two years. Saathoff plans to join the family farm operation upon graduation.

"I feel that agriculture will always be the most important industry in the world," he said. "And I intend to contribute my part to it all my life."

John Saathoff, left, University of Maryland Eastern Shore senior, and Lee Richardson, University of Delaware junior, were presented with $500 scholarships by Frank Webb, right, at the 1991 Delmarva Corn and Soybean Technology Conference, Feb. 13 in Salisbury, Md.

Consumers Have Stake In Food Policy

CHICAGO, Ill.— Farmers have gathered in two of the nation's largest cities recently to protest low farm prices and to win consumer support for changes in U.S. farm and food policy.

The farmers, who say they risk losing their farms under current government policies, gave away loaves of bread to passers-by in New York and Chicago to point out the small share of consumers' food dollars that food producers actually recoup.

Officials of the National Farmers Union (NFU), the group that organized the demonstrations, say wheat farmers collect less than five cents of the retail cost of a loaf of bread.

"Consumers need to know that they have a stake in our country's farm and food policy," said an NFU statement. "If farmers can't make it, consumers will suffer from an unstable, costlier food supply."

The farm group is upset about the new five-year farm law passed by Congress late last year. NFU projects that as many as one-fourth of the nation's two million farmers may be forced out of business due to low farm prices between now and 1995.

During the last six months, prices farmers receive for wheat and dairy products have fallen by as much as 30 percent, putting a strain on already depressed rural economies. Retail prices paid by consumers for the same products have remained largely unchanged during the period.

The farmers say the new farm bill will worsen the situation for food producers. "What we need are policies that stabilize food production and supplies. But we don't have that, and farmers and consumers alike will suffer the consequences," said the statement.

The farmers' organization has been an advocate of government policies that work to stimulate farm commodity prices through supply-stabilization programs. But the less-government-is-better philosophy coming from Washington during the last decade has whittled the cost and effectiveness of farm policies and left farmers to compete in an unstable world marketplace.

Farmers Union contends the food industry could face the same sort of problems being faced in the oil industry today -- import dependency, and prices that are dictated by world events.

The farm group is petitioning Congress to re-examine the farm law this year. But they say that would not require a larger infusion of taxpayer dollars to fund the program. NFU leaders say an effective farm policy could be written that stabilizes farm production and prices without costing the government more.

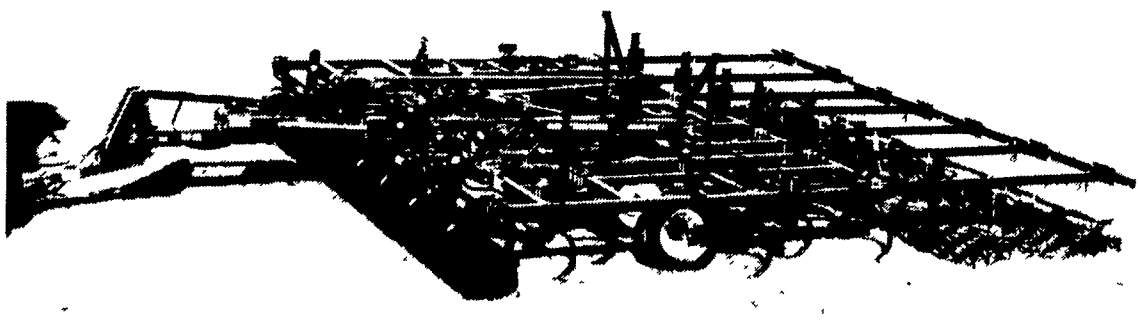
M & W Gear Provides Spring Tillage Tool



GIBSON CITY, Ill.— M & W Gear Company announces a new spring tillage tool for high residue farming, the M & W Tilthmaster.

Designed as the ideal companion to the Earthmaster fall tillage tool, the Tilthmaster has more under frame clearance and an extended frame design to allow easier residue flow between tines.

Spring-loaded disc gangs are available with smooth, rippled, or notched blades to cut through heavy residue. Four rows of high clearance, narrow profile tines with 9" hardened ultra wing sweeps cut through residue and mix it with the soil.

Specially spaced tines and a high 28½ " under frame ground clearance allow residue to flow through easily. The Fuerst Flexible Tine Harrow is available to smooth the ground, incorporate chemicals, and provide the ideal seedbed.

A front-mounted, pin-adjusted hydraulic depth control and a self-leveling hitch are standard equipment. A tandem walking axle carries the mainframe and gauge wheels are used at each wing.

Wings are hydraulically folded. The Tilthmaster comes complete with cylinders, hoses, transport lock, and tongue jack. Disc scrapers and a safety chain kit are optional.

The award is given, in appreciation, to the vegetable grower who best exemplifies the adoption, practice, and support of the Vegetable IPM Program, by Dr. Donald J. Prostak, pest management extension specialist.

On their Indian Mills, Burlington County farm, this father and son have followed sweet corn IPM program recommendations for 19 years. IPM techniques and practices help growers maintain the quality of their produce while minimizing the economic and environmental impact of unnecessary pesticide use. Their cooperation in the early years was instrumental in the development and implementation of the IPM program strategies as they are used today.

Pro Staph Testing Available Through Maryland DHIC

One of the keys to a successful mastitis control program is identification of the type of bacteria which is prevalent in the herd. This information has been available from bacteriological culture of milk samples. But culturing milk requires the collection of an aseptic sample, extra time to deliver sample to lab or veterinarian, and results may not be available for several days. A new test, ProStaph I™, has been developed to circumvent some of the disadvantages of culturing. It is a test used to detect antibodies found in milk that are specific for Staph aureus. The one-hour test can be conducted on chemically preserved milk samples that are submitted for DHI testing each month. Only Staph aureus is detected with ProStaph testing, and thus, if other types of mastitis organisms are in the herd, culturing must be carried out to discover the identity of the other mastitis-causing bacteria.

Eradication of Staph aureus from the herd is possible, but most dairy farms have one or more cows with this type of mastitis. Cultures conducted on 28 herds in Virginia and 24 herds in Maryland found 10% of the cows infected with Staph aureus. Before eradication is possible, a regular monitoring program must be implemented to detect cows with Staph aureus, Dr. G.M. Jones at Virginia Tech discovered that although average DHI somatic cell counts of cows infected with Staph aureus is high (greater than 2.2 million cells/ml) only 40% of the infections were found in cows with SCC of more than 400,000, and 32% were found in milk with less than 200,000 SCC. As many as one-half of the cows with increased SCC may be infected with Staph aureus, but cows with low DHI SCC also are infected with Staph aureus.

Results of ProStaph testing are reported as an Optical Density (O.D.) Index. The Index is calculated by dividing an unknown sample O.D. with the O.D. level that corresponds to culture results that are highly probable to be positive for Staph aureus. For example, if the positive control is .40 O.D., the unknown is .50 O.D., the ProStaph Index is 125%. This means the cow is almost certain to be infected with Staph aureus. Conversely, if the unknown sample O.D. is .05, the ProStaph Index is 12.5%, and the cow is considered free of infection.

It is recommended that bulk tank milk be tested first followed by whole herd testing if the bulk tank sample is positive. Scoring the sample results and O.D. thresholds, however, varies depending on the type of sample taken:

Cows with Staph aureus infections often shed the bacteria into milk intermittently. Because periods of shedding can vary from days to months, culture and SCC results can be misleading. Antibody levels measured by ProStaph, however, tend to remain increased during periods when persistently infected cows do not shed enough Staph aureus for detection with culture. But ProStaph testing does not entirely replace culture and SCC testing because there is a lag of 2-8 weeks after infection before adequate quantities of antibody appear in milk. Use of SCC and ProStaph results from each milk sample usually will yield a clear interpretation of the Staph infection status. Culture may be needed to confirm the results in some cases.

A decision tree was developed at the University of Wisconsin-Madison for using and interpreting ProStaph results (Table 1). ProStaph positive, suspect, and negative results would be +3, +2 and 0 or +1 scores, respectively.

The guidelines on retesting cows are as follows:

- If 10% or more of your herd scores +2 or +3, retest the whole herd once each month for the next two months to detect new infections not detactable at initial screening.
- Retest +2 and +3 cows which are less than 30 days fresh and those producing less than 30 lbs. of milk per day. Increased antibody concetrations during these times may not accurately reflect infection status.
- Retest +3 cows that have SCC of less than 200,000 (LS<4) because this is an uncommon situation.

Maryland DHIC sends the milk samples to the Virginia DHI lab for ProStaph testing. The cost depends on the number of samples submitted as follows:

Number Of Samples	Cost DHI Member	Cost Non-DHI Member
1-5	$3.50	$4 00
6-10	3 00	3.50
11-50	2 65	3.00
51-100	2.50	2 75
>100	2.25	2.50

Management measures that reduce the probability of exposing teats of uninfected cow to Staph aureus infected cows are as follows:

1. Maintain and properly operate functionally adequate milking equipment, e.g., use individual towels and do not overmilk cows.
2. Change liners regularly.
3. Milk clean and dry teats.
4. Use an effective teat dip.
5. Backflush units of Staph-infected cows. Identify these cows with leg bands or other means to insure remembering which units to backflush.
6. Cull Staph cows when possible.
7. Monitor control program with DHI SCC, ProStaph and culture testing.

Summary: ProStaph testing is a new antibody test to detect Staph aureus in milk. It should be used in conjunction with somatic cell counts and culturing to identify cows with Staph aureus infections. The justification for using the test as identification of Staph cows so that action may be taken to reduce exposure to uninfected cows in the herd. Improved mastitis control from prevention of infection could mean greater income from milk quality bonuses and increased milk production.

Improving Baby Lamb Survival

The single greatest factor affecting profit and loss to the sheep operation is the number of lambs weaned per ewe per year. In other words, when all lambs have been weaned, total that number

PROWL® Knocks Triazine-Resistant Weeds On Their Ear. For $5 An Acre Less.

PROWL® herbicide handles the toughest triazine-resistant weeds in corn, like pigweed, lambsquarters and kochia. Other tough grasses and broadleaf weeds like foxtails, velvetleaf* and woolly cupgrass* are also controlled all season long with PROWL. Plus, PROWL® herbicide costs about $5 an acre less than Dual[1] or Lasso[2].

Con-till. No-till. Conventional. PROWL works in any tillage system and can be applied anytime after planting up to the four-leaf stage. Do NOT incorporate PROWL in corn.

Tank mix PROWL and get even broader-spectrum control for problem weeds like wild proso millet, shattercane and seedling Johnsongrass.

This season, for proven cost-effective control of grasses and broadleaf weeds in corn, put PROWL to work in your fields. It really packs a punch.

and divide by the number of ewes exposed to rams during the last breeding season. The result should approach 200%. The number of lambs weaned per ewe per year is a function of the number and type of births (single, twins, etc.) as well as the survival rate of live-born lambs to weaning. The focus of this paper will be on the practical aspects of improving baby lamb survival.

Baby lamb survival is a reflection of ewe care, both pre- and during lambing as well as lamb care at post lambing.

Prelambing Ewe Management

Prelambing care of bred ewes is critical, especially in the last six weeks of gestation. Approximately 70% of fetal growth will occur during these last six weeks. Ewes must be provided adequate nutrition to prevent pregnancy related disease, such as ketosis, and ensure the birth of strong healthy lambs. Ewes in late gestation carrying a single lamb will require 50% more energy and ewes with twins or triplets will require 75% more energy to support fetal growth and maintain body condition. Ewes should be gaining weight in the last six weeks of gestation and not losing body condition.

Green leafy alfalfa fed at a rate of 4.5-5.5 lbs./ewe/day can easily meet the daily nutrient requirements for energy and protein until the last 4-6 weeks of gestation. In late gestation, grain will need to be substituted for some of the roughage to provide adequate energy.

In addition to adequate nutrition, ewe care before lambing should include shearing or at least crutching (removal of wool from around the birth canal, udder and flanks) approximately 6-8 weeks prior to the expected start of lambing. Shearing or crutching reduces soiled wool, decreases the moisture inside the barn, improves sanitation and allows newborn lambs easy access to the udder. Shearing also allows better monitoring of ewe body condition and closer observation of the ewe as lambing proceeds.

Numerous research studies have looked at the benefits of shearing ewes prior to lambing versus after lambing. In general, it has been demonstrated that ewes shorn prior to lambing had heavier lambs at birth compared to unshorn ewes. In some cases, energy intake by the shorn ewes increased and in other studies it did not change. The birth weight results were consistent. Other aspects, such as the availability of shelter, expected environmental conditions, labor availability and the impact of lactational stress on wool quality, must also be considered by each individual producer when deciding on prelambing shearing practices.

Finally, the ewe flock should receive a booster vaccination against clostridium prefringen type C and D. This will help protect the ewes against disease resulting from high levels of grain in the diet as well as increase antibody levels present in the colostrum and passed on to the lambs. Other vaccinations or injections, such as tetanus, may also be administered prior to lambing. It is a good idea to consult your local veterinarian to develop a year-round flock health program.

Lambing Time

At the start of lambing, clean dry bedding should be available in the lambing barn. Lambing pens (jugs) should have been cleaned, disinfected and ready to accept the newborn lambs and their mothers.

Know the signs of lambing. Ewes prefer to lamb alone and will often go off by themselves to lamb. As long as all goes well, leave them alone. Signs of lambing include restlessness, raising the dock, stretching, looking back at their abdomen, getting up and lying down frequently and obvious straining. The total time span for a normal delivery is about 5 hours; 4 hours for dilation of the cervix and about 1 hour for the actual delivery. When the birth process proceeds normally, the water sac will appear followed by the lambs two front feet and nose. As long as you can detect progress and the presentation is normal (two front legs first with nose between them), things are alright. If the ewe appears to strain for 30-45 minutes with no progress, check to find out what is wrong. Prepare yourself for assisting with abnormal births or seek competent help.

Once a lamb is born, be sure it starts breathing. Clean any mucous or membranes away from its nose and mouth. The ewe will usually get up and begin to clean the lamb soon after it is born. This is natural and should be allowed to continue. Lambs that have a difficult time breathing may be stimulated by tickling the inside of a nostril with a piece of hay to induce a sneeze.

Immediately after birth and the lamb has started breathing, Iodine (7% tincture) should be applied to the newborn's navel. Use a wide-mouth jar and immerse the navel up the belly. This practice will reduce the chance of navel and subsequent systemtic infection. The lamb may also be ear tagged and weighed at this time.

Next, lambs should be encouraged to nurse as soon as possible to gain the maximum absorption of antibodies from the ewe's colostrum (first milk). Lambs that are slow to nurse should be tube fed colostrum. It is extremely important to get colostrum into newborn lambs as quickly as possible as colostrum absorption from the lambs intestine will decline rapidly. By 36-48 hours after birth, newborn lambs are incapable of absorbing antibodies and benefiting from the ewe's colostrum.

A good rule of thumb is to make sure that a lamb nurses its dam or is tube fed colostrum no later than 6-12 hours immediately after birth. A newborn lamb should nurse at least a quart of colostrum within the first 24 hours, preferably divided into two nursings of one pint each. This is a minimum requirement.

Reducing Mortality

Hypothermia and starvation account for nearly 30% of all preweaning lamb losses, and the majority of these losses occur prior to three weeks of age. Hypothermia and starvation are the leading causes of lamb death during the first week of life. A newborn lamb is particularly susceptible to starvation and hypothermia because of limited body stores of energy (fat) to draw upon to maintain body temperature. In a lamb, energy reserves amount to only about 3% of their bodyweight compared to 10-15% in an adult sheep. This factor reinforces the need for prompt and sufficient energy intake in the newborn.

The sheep producer must pay close attention to the newborn lambs to detect chilled or inactive lambs which will need immediate attention. A normal thrifty lamb will be bright-eyed and alert and will nurse vigorously and sleep often. Unthrifty lambs may be too weak to stand or will stand isolated with its head low and ears dropping. Lambs in a weak condition will become chilled and dehydrated quickly. The normal body temperature of a lamb will range from 101° and a low body temperature (below 100° bath. Vigorously towel dry the lamb after it has warmed up and allow it to nurse. A heat lamp can also be used but is more likely to dehydrate the lamb. Lambs should be checked frequently for signs of nursing or full bellies and signs of diseases, such as scours and pneumonia.

Lambs that become orphans need extra care and may either be grafted onto another ewe or raised in an "orphan pen." Lambs can be successfully reared on a high-quality milk replacer after receiving colostrum and can be easily adapted to a self-feeder. Self feeding of milk replacer saves labor and allows the lambs to receive a more uniform intake of milk.

Finally, take time to prepare for lambing season. Gather the supplies you will need and have them easily accessible. Table 1 lists a number of supplies that should be part of your "Shepherds Kit."

Lambing is an exciting and rewarding time and with the proper knowledge, preparation and commitment, will be the start of a profitable year for the sheep producer.

New Calf Implant Available

A new implant that enhances growth of beef and dairy beef calves is available. The progesterone-estradiol benzoate implant is to be used in calves at least 45 days old and weighing up to 400 pounds which are intended for slaughter.

Tradenamed CALF-oid®, the implant is available in a 10-dose cassette, along with a hand-held implanter that uses disposable, preloaded, plastic needles. As a result, small-scale producers can avoid the high initial investment for large implanting guns or the purchase of large quantities of implants.

Large herd producers also will be able to use CALF-oid, as it is available in 20-dose cartridge belts for use with multidose implanting guns.

Results from studies at Texas A&M University showed that implanting increased weaning weight of calves an average 25.1 pounds. At an auction selling price of $0.83 per pound, that gain represents an addition $20.83 of gross income per calf. With an average implant cost of $1.00 and labor cost of $1.00 per calf, the net return per animal works out to $18.83, more than $9 return for each dollar invested.

Other studies conducted in Georgia, North Carolina, Colorado and Texas compared the use of CALF-oid with non-implanted controls. The studies involved 446 crossbred calves weighing approximately 250 pounds. Calves were implanted with CALF-oid and pastured with their dams for the duration of the 112-day study.

Results showed an average weight gain of 189 pounds and improvement in average daily gain of 8.21 percent over non-implanted controls. Similar returns can be expected when CALF-oid is used in dairy beef calves intended for slaughter. Predicted results in dairy beef calves include an average reduction in days to market of 10 days.

CALF-oid is being marketed through retail outlets. For more information on calf implanting or use of the product, write CALF-oid, The Upjohn Company, P.O. Box 5087, Kalamazoo, MI 49003-5087.

Follow The Leader

Since it's the biggest quick-service restaurant in the world, people naturally look to McDonald's as a leader in food trends. And when that company introduced a new low-fat ground beef sandwich last fall, it once again proved its leadership.

The 91 percent-lean burger was developed with beef checkoff funds, and the McDonald's introduction was its first test in the marketplace. Since McDonald's introduced its McLean Deluxe in Pennsylvania, it has expanded the sandwich's offerings to 228 stores in Oregon, Tennessee, Ohio and Minnesota.

The beef checkoff-funded low-fat beef technology is being investigated by many other foodservice operators as well as by retailers who want to provide lower fat selections in their meat cases. Because low-fat ground beef research was conducted at Auburn University and funded through the checkoff, technology for producing it is available to anyone interested in its use.

True Environmentalists

Environmentalists are not all cast from the same mold. In fact, some environmentalists go by a different name -- cattle producers.

According to a recent independent survey, the nation's cattle producers are active in conservation programs, reducing their use of pesticides in feed crop production, and providing water and habitat to wildlife. The cattle producer's commitment to the environment is important, since cattlemen own or manage more land than any other industry in this country. Almost half of the total land area of the U.S. is pasture and grazing land.

The survey shows that land and water conservation and protection are part of the cattleman's way of life. That conservation is a vital investment, not only in the cattle producer's business but in his or her family's future.

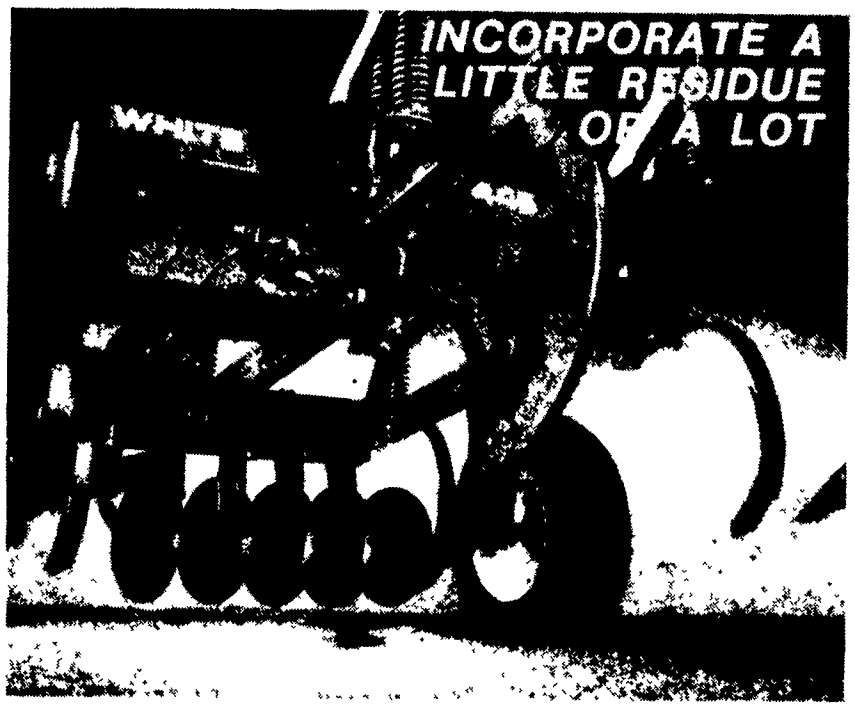
The new White 445 Conservation Disc Chisel

WHITE

by White-New Idea © 1990

White Planters give you better stands.



Protect Your Soil From Erosion

The new White 445 Conservation Disc Chisel can help you conserve your most valuable asset -- soil
The new White 445 can help you properly incorporate crop residue to match your soil type and percent of slope. With a choice of maximum incorporation cutting discs or minimum incorporation straight colters, you can incorporate residue to the level you desire. Choose either twisted or straight chisel points to shatter soil and mix residue to meet your needs. And the optional deep tillage shanks to break up hardpan and increase moisture absorption:

Performance

Our front cutter assembly is hydraulically actuated to control depth of the disc. Also, discs are individually mounted, not ganged, so they cover all the ground. When necessary, add our new leveling bar to help level your fields.

Tri-level Tillage

The 445 works the soil at three levels. Concave discs work down to 7 inches while the chisel shanks shatter soil down to 12 inches. With the optional deep-till shanks you can penetrate down to 18 inches. With the new White 445, tri-level tillage can be accomplished in only one pass.

Planter Accuracy

- Get precise, consistent spacing with the unique White Metering System. Simple, low air pressure design individually spaces seeds—including soybeans.
- Control depth accurately with double disc openers and dual depth gauge wheels with walking beam axles.
- Choose from a wide variety of rigid and folding White Planters for nearly any row crop.
- Many attachments available, including fertilizer equipment, herbicide/insecticide units, deluxe monitor and press wheels.

Plant with accuracy, fit your farming practices. See us today for more information on White Planters.

BARN PAINTING
Aim For The Best -
In Coating Film Thickness

To do it right use the finest kind of bristle brush evening out the coating into a film thickness that does not peel in normal moisture stress (found on most barn siding from outside and inside by livestock or stored animal feed)

1. PREPARATION. Peeling old coatings (improperly brushed),needs to be removed The best again is simply water blasting or power washing! High volume of water - medium pressure is best! Done professionally or do it yourself, especially on the easy to reach areas
2. MAKING A NEW START spray on brush in painting on the renewed surface or resurfaced wood siding The above mentioned AIM of coating thickness can prevent future peeling and resurfacing cost & effort Simple, old fashioned brushing does most of the trick This film will let moisture breathe through it Depending on the amount of weather wear it can be recoated lightly in 10 years of more Southern exposures usually wear faster

Saving Farmland Purpose Of Conference

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On March 7 and 8, conservationists, environmentalists, farmers, federal and state government officials, and interested citizens from around the country will gather in Washington for a landmark conference, sponsored by the American Farmland Trust (AFT) to debate the future of America's farmland.

Each minute, the United States loses three acres of farmland to encroaching urban sprawl; each year, three billion tons of topsoil blow and wash away from the nation's farms. Mistreatment of farmland threatens the quality of water and wildlife habitat. Unprecedented water shortages are bringing severe problems to Western farms, while farmers throughout the country are finding it harder and harder to break even. In order for the nation's land to remain productive for future generations, urban Americans and farmers must work together to develop innovative agricultural conservation strategies.

EPA Administrator William Reilly, Senator Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), and Assistant Secretary of Agriculture James Moseley are three of more than 100 experts who will address these and other agricultural resource conservation issues at the conference entitled, "Saving the Land that Feeds America: Conservation in the Nineties." Topics range from the impact of farming on water and wildlife to sustainable agriculture and land protection strategies.

The event, scheduled at the J. W. Marriott Hotel, is co-sponsored by 22 agriculture, conservation, and land-use organizations. Other key speakers include U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Director John Turner, Soil Conservation Service (SCS) Chief William Richards, American Farmland Trust President Ralph Grossi, and AFT Senior Advisor and former SCS chief Norman Berg.

Part of AFT's 10th anniversary celebration, the conference comes a decade after the completion of the National Agricultural Lands Study which found that the United States was losing three million acres of farmland a year and inspired the formation of AFT.

Board Approves More Funds To Preserve Farmland

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Agricultural Land Preservation Board has approved spending an additional $21 million for counties to purchase agricultural conservation easements to save prime farmland.

Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff, who chairs the board, said the 1991 state allocation adds to $45 million allocated in 1989 and 1990.

To date, $7.8 million has been spent to purchase easements on 2,801 acres on 30 Pennsylvania farms.

The 1991 state allocation was set at $21 million to meet matching fund formulas in the Farmland Preservation Act. Counties have contributed nearly $10 million in local funds to support the program.

"When you add up what the state has allocated and the local money, the people of Pennsylvania wind up with more than $75 million to drive our effort to protect productive farms for our children and their children," Wolff said. "The size of these commitments demonstrates that our citizens intend to save an irreplaceable natural resource."

Pennsylvania's farmland protection program is funded by a $100 million bond issue approved by voters in a statewide referendum in 1987.

Funds are allocated based on development pressure, agricultural production and county appropriations.

The state Agricultural Land Preservation Board also approved rules and procedures to operate county farmland preservation programs in Blair, Lycoming, and Northampton counties. In order to receive state funding, each county must submit a proposed plan of operation for board approval. Officials in counties with approved programs can purchase agricultural easements.

Since 1989, 25 counties have allocated local funds to purchase agricultural easements. Officials from Perry and Snyder counties committed funds to the program for the first time this year.

Since 1989, Lancaster County has made the largest contribution, with $2,406,000 in local funds supporting easement purchases.

In other board action, easement purchases were approved for six farms. The farms are located in Lancaster, Bucks, and Berks counties. Those easements will protect 497 acres of prime farmland from development.

Under Pennsylvania's farmland protection program, farmers can sell their development rights based on appraisals of their farms. The price per acre is the difference between appraisals as farmland and as development land.

Following is the total farmland preservation funds available to each county.

"Farming is a big investment...
Time is valuable. An equipment breakdown in the field, delayed supplies, or sudden weather changes mean lost dollars, without quick reaction. Our GE mobile radio system gives us greater control and coordination over our operation. It's a farmer's friend."
Roger C Garber
James M Garber & Sons
Why are farmers turning to mobile radio? During planting and harvesting your farm and equipment need to be operating at full potential. General Electric Mobile Radio Systems provide quick, cost effective communications from home or field. It's like having another "farm hand" to help with the chores.

Akins Becomes Anitech Board Chair

TORONTO, Canada — Zane Akins has been appointed chairman of the board of Anitech International, Inc., a subsidiary of Anitech Identification Systems, Inc.

Anitech International, Inc. is responsible for the marketing of electronic identification devices for animals in the United States. The devices, which include electronic transponders and readers, are manufactured by Destron/IDI, Inc., a Boulder, Colorado, firm.

Transponders, implanted just under the skin of dairy cows, can provide permanent identification and automatic ID read-out through milking parlors, feeding stations, or by hand-held readers. Such identification can be coupled with computerized dairy management systems.

The Holstein Association of America and the National Dairy Herd Improvement Association announced an agreement in 1990 to introduce the new identification technology to the nation's dairy industry. Together, the two national organizations serve a significant majority of the U.S. dairymen.

Akins, president of Akins and Associates, a Vermont-based management consulting firm, was formerly chief executive officer of the Holstein Association, a national organization of 56,000 breeders of Registered Holstein cattle. Akins resigned his post in December, after 25 years of service to the Holstein organization.

ARP Sign-Up In March

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Sign-up for the 1991 Acreage Reduction Program (ARP) will be held from March 4 through April 16, said Paul Kline, chairman of the Lancaster County Ag Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASC) committee.

The ARP, or set-aside program, was authorized under the 1990 Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act, signed by the President in November 1990.

"There are several changes for 1991 that may be appealing to Lancaster County farmers who have crop acreage bases," said Kline, "and there is more flexibility in this program than there was in the past."

Participation in one program crop, for instance, does not limit the planting of another program crop, so that farmers who overplanted wheat may still participate in corn. Kline mentioned that the set-aside acres are calculated on a percentage of the base in 1991 instead of a factor applied to the planted acres.

The basic reduction requirements are 7.5 percent for corn and barley and 15 percent for wheat. There will be no set-aside acreage required for oats. The acres on which payment will be computed will be reduced by another 15 percent this year because of the Budget Reconciliation Act.

However, other crops, except fruits and vegetables, may be grown on the so-called "flex acres."

The target prices remain the same as 1990 prices at $2.75 for corn, $4.00 for wheat, and $2.36 for barley. Farmers who participate become eligible for price support loans and may receive advance payments at signup.

Beekeeping Seminar Set

EBENSBURG (Cambria Co.) — "Research With Mites" and "Working With Africanized Bees" are two topics to be presented by Maryann Tomasko, entomologist, and Bill Clerk, retired apiarist, at the 1991 Western Pennsylvania Beekeeping Seminar.

The seminar is scheduled for Saturday, March 9, 1991, at the Park United Presbyterian Church in Zelienople, Pa.; from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Clark will also present information on processing and marketing and international beekeeping.

The cost of the seminar is $8 per person, which includes a light lunch. The registration deadline is March 1, 1991, and enrollment is limited to the first 100 registrants.

To register, send your check payable to "Extension Special Account" along with your name, address, and phone number to Penn State Cooperative Extension, Attn: Beekeeping Seminar, P.O. Box 99, Beaver, PA 15009.

MILK REPLACERS

Milk replacers keep getting better. Today, you can actually feed a milk replacer and not expect the entire litter to die of diarrhea.

Let's look at the progress in the milk replacer business, proper feeding strategy, and potential for product improvement.

Milk replacer composition

Protein in the replacer normally runs 22-30 percent and should be milk-based. Plant proteins (such as soy proteins) cause an inflammatory response in the gut wall of the pig. The younger the pig, the worse the response. There should be few, if any, plant products listed on the tag.

The fat content of sow's milk is about 30 percent on a dry matter basis. That's a little difficult to manage in a milk replacer — but a minimum of 10 percent fat is apparently vital to good performance. It's not clear whether animal fat is superior to vegetable oil.

Lactose, or milk sugar, should be the main carbohydrate in a milk replacer since pigs can digest it easily. Look for whey on the tag. That's a good source of lactose.

Organic acids are starting to appear in some milk replacers. These replacers are easy to identify since "acid" or "acidified" will appear in the literature somewhere.

Lowering the pH of the milk replacer makes good sense. The product won't spoil as quickly once reconstituted (three to four days shelf-life vs. one day for non-acidified products). There may be less bacterial growth in the gut if the pig ingests a product that has a pH of 4 or 5. And there is some evidence that the organic acids aid in digestion.

Most milk replacers contain an antibiotic, usually neomycin, to curb scours. This is probably essential, but it's unfortunate, since neomycin kills many of the beneficial bacterial as well as the pathogens.

"Littermilk," a milk replacer manufactured by Land O'Lakes, also contains another "factor" to prevent scours. It does seem to work against one serotype of E.coli, the K-99.

One area of research that shows promise is that of supplementing milk replacers with immunoglobulins (Igs). You'll recall that Igs are the special proteins in milk, especially colostrum, that protect newborns from disease.

Taking Igs from either the cow or the sow and adding them to sow milk replacer improves survival rates in baby pigs, reduces the incidence of diarrhea, and increases growth rates. Interestingly, the Igs are obtained and purified from blood at slaughter.

Milk replacer to replace sow's milk

Think of this as a last resort. Only when all possibilities for cross fostering are exhausted should you consider artificial rearing.

First, sow's milk is a lot cheaper. A healthy sow consumes about 12 pounds of feed and returns about two gallons of milk each day. At $160/ton for feed, excluding buildings and overhead, that comes to about $0.48 per gallon of sows milk.

I recently priced four milk replacers available in this state — Carl Akey's "Litter Life," Land O'Lakes "Littermilk," Purina's "Baby Pig Milk Replacer," and Cadco's "Littermelk." The costs ranged from about $1 to nearly $2 per reconstituted gallon. So the artificial stuff costs at least double the real thing.

Obviously real sow's milk is the standard of comparison for performance. And that says nothing of the immune protection that the sow provides to the baby pigs through the milk.

But when sow's milk is in short supply, milk replacer (expensive as it is) can save both pigs and money. Some tips on keeping costs down and survival up are 1) Keep the pigs clean, warm and dry. That's easier said than done. Feeding milk replacer and keeping the pigs dry do not run hand-in-hand. Consider using one of the commercial feeders (Kane has a good one) or some device that keeps the pigs out of the milk. Open pans are the worst. But no matter what, keep the milk replacer clean and fresh. 2) Most pigs learn to drink by accident or have to be taught. Be prepared to spend some time with the orphaned pigs until they learn the ropes of their new environment. When in doubt, keep the pigs on the hungry side — especially during the first few days. As long as they're eating something, they'll usually survive. It's when they overconsume that the diarrhea can get ahead of you. In any case, plan on looser-than-normal stools. 4) Keep pigs on the milk replacer until another sow becomes available or until they start eating solid feed, whichever comes first. Again, milk replacer is expensive. Use it only when you have to. 5) Remember that the biggest pig in the litter has the best chance of surviving the transition from sow to milk replacer. If you're going to artificially rear only part of the litter, you'll be better off leaving the smallest pigs on the sow.

LEADERSHIP AT WORK

Who Wins When Feed Prices Are Low?

MILTON MADISON
Asst. Professor, PSU
Poultry Science

Poultry producers are fond of complaining when feed prices increase. With feed prices representing up to 70 percent of on-farm production costs, who can blame them! But are lower feed prices better? Perhaps all meat producers, poultry producers in particular, need to reconsider their complaints.

My colleague Lou Moore enjoys quoting the meat industry forecasting equation: low feed prices lead to low meat prices which lead to tough times for meat producers. All meat producers have seen this equation hold true, and because poultry producers can expand production quickly, they see the effects much sooner than beef and pork producers. But the initial effect of lower feed prices is increased profits, which is the part producers remember and look forward to.

The toughest economic hardships often come at the end of an expansion cycle when producers face low meat prices and higher feed prices at the same time. The initial effect here is that producers become less profitable because of higher feed costs, and again that is what producers remember and dread. The various meat production groups are usually at different stages of expansion when the price-cost squeeze on profitability comes, so it has always been hard to judge which producers are being hurt the least and which the most.

Two USDA agricultural economists, Richard Stillman and Mark Weimar, formulated the Annual Livestock Model to examine questions such as: What happens to meat production when feed prices are lower? Which meat producers profit from lower feed prices and which lose? The researchers examined what would happen to livestock production groups if feed prices dropped by 10 percent and stayed at that level for 11 years. Their results were reported in the October 1990 issue of "Agricultural Outlook."

The early results are familiar because they are seen fairly often. All producers take steps to expand future production and take advantage of lower production costs to increase profits. Broiler, turkey and pork producers, because of their animals' shorter reproduction cycles, increase production within the first year and continue to expand for the first several years. Beef producers, in order to expand, first retain breeding stock from potential meat animals, so their production during the first year will actually be lower than it would have been without expansion.

When examining actual market occurrences, results of a feed cost decrease in later years are harder to observe, since they are often clouded by additional feed price and consumer taste fluctuations. In the Stillman and Weimar model, other variables are controlled so the effects of the feed cost reduction are not distorted. Results of the 10 percent feed price decrease are compared to a base case in which feed prices remain constant.

The research results hold some interesting implications for broiler and turkey producers. The efficiency with which these birds utilize feed, compared to other meat animals, makes feed price declines work against producers. Throughout the 11 years considered, broiler and turkey production continues to increase. However, when compared to the constant feed price projection, poultry production increases by less when feed prices decline.

For the consumer, lower feed prices mean more total meat production and a gradual decline in meat prices. After some initial meat price increases for beef and turkey, meat will be selling for about 2 percent less than it would have if feed prices had not decreased.

When net returns to producers are examined, poultry producers benefit from higher returns for the first three years and then have lower returns for the rest of the 11-year period. Poultry producer's earnings for the entire period are lower than they would have been if feed prices had not declined. Beef and pork producers, however, earn higher returns for the entire period than they would have if feed prices had not declined.

By the ninth year, beef and pork returns are nearly the same as they would have been without the price increase, but earlier returns are substantially higher. These results indicate poultry producers have an advantage when their competitors have to pay higher feed costs.

Mitchell Receives 2d Place

EXTON (Chester Co.) — A yield of 177.98 bushels per acre recently gave Jeffrey Mitchell second place in the class A non-irrigated division of the National Corn Growers Association, (NCGA) 1990 national corn yield contest in Pennsylvania.

The winning entry, Pioneer brand 3343, was planted on April 25, 1990 in a 144.82-acre field that contained hay in 1989. Planting was in 30-inch rows at a rate of 25,106 seeds per acre using a Case IH 800 planter. The winning yield was harvested October 16, 1990 at 23 percent moisture.

Mitchell applied approximately 180 pounds of nitrogen, 36 pounds of phosphate, and 48 pounds of potash per acre to the contest entry. He also applied sulfur. To control weeds, he applied Bicep preemergence at 3 quarts per acre.

Milk replacer to supplement the sow

Field studies in England show benefits to providing a milk replacer in the creep area. Offering the milk replacer after the pigs are two days old seems to provide the best results.

Under their condiditions, milk replacer consumption reached about four quarts per litter per day by the end of the first week. Pigs ate often and only a little at a time, usually coinciding with nursing activity on the sow.

Piglets with access to the milk replacer had weaning weights 1.5 pounds heavier than piglets receiving no milk replacer. Producers also observed that litters were more uniform, and first-week mortality was reduced from 13.7 to 10.9 percent.

At the time of the studies (1986), researchers calculated a payback using $30 for feeder cost and $0.70/pound for the milk replacer powder (closer to $1/pound today).

Milk replacer at weaning

The University of Wisconsin completed a study a few years ago using Land O'Lake's "Littermilk" as a supplement to nursery feed. At weaning, pigs were allowed free access to dry feed, plus "Littermilk" for the first four days.

The results were impressive. Pigs fed milk replacer and dry feed weighed 36-40 pounds four weeks after weaning (depending on the amount of milk replacer they received) vs. 34 pounds for pigs consuming only dry feed.

Feeding the milk replacer free choice for two days and then cutting it in half for the next two days provided the highest and most economical weight gains.

Summary

1. Offering milk replacer is a good alternative when a sow is short on available teats, short on milk, or has no milk. Because reconstituted milk replacers cost at least twice as much as sow's milk, rear pigs artificially only as a last resort. Move pigs onto a foster sow whenever possible.
2. When getting orphaned pigs started on milk replacer, maintain sanitation and keep pigs on the hungry side to reduce diarrhea.
3. Offering milk replacer in the creep area as a supplement to sow's milk may pay dividends with lower mortality, heavier pigs at weaning, and reduced death losses.
4. Providing both milk replacer and dry feed at weaning time may eliminate the typical post weaning lag. A four-day feeding scheme (free choice for two days, cut in half the next two days) seems to provide the most economical weight gain.
5. Future milk replacers may have added immunoglobulins which will improve both performance and disease resistance.
